UC Study Shows Epidemic Reaching Peak This Year

But Figures Questioned By Other Researchers; Early Intervention Treatments May Slow Illness

by Ray O'Loughlin

A new study by University of California at San Francisco researchers has concluded that the AIDS epidemic will soon reach—and may have already reached—its peak in the San Francisco gay community. But quickly putting a cloud to its silver lining, the same report estimates that the incubation period for the illness to appear may be nearly ten years. The findings of UCSF epidemiologists Peter Bacchetti and Andrew Moss were published in the March 16 issue of the British journal Nature. They immediately came under question by other experts in the field field.

Using stored blood specimen some dating back as far as 1978, Bacchetti and Moss compared patterns of antibody development that linked human immunodeficiency virus (HIV) infection to patterns of new AIDS cases diagnosed in San Francis-co. The current study is the first to link the observed incidence rates in gay men with the drop in new infections believed to have happened between 1982-84.

The UCSF researchers predict new AIDS cases among San Francisco gay men will peak this year, followed by a gradual decline in incidence. In fact, the peak may have already occurred, said Moss, UCSF associate ad-junct professor of epidemiology and internal health and director of the AIDS epidemiology group at SFGH.

The decline is due to a dramatic drop of more than 80 percent in new infections in 1982-84, said Bacchetti, assistant adjunct pro-fessor of epidemiology and inter-national health at SFGH. During that time, the number of new (Continued on page 2)

Hearing Postponed For Smoot Killing Investigators

Defense Wants More Documents As Evidence; Commission Action Could Be Delayed Months

by Dennis McMillan

Four police officers accused of neglecting their duty during the Smoot murder investigations in November 1987 went before the San Francisco Police Commission March 15 on disciplinary charges. Attorneys for the four accused investigators—Frank McCoy, Marvin Dean, William Kidd, and Antonio Casillas—were granted a continuance by the commission until the matter of custody of certain documents of evidence can be decided.

The hearing was the result of a finding by the Office of Citizen Complaints last year that the four had poorly handled the investigation. The original OCC complaint was filed by activist Bill Paul on behalf of the Stonewall Pamoreris Chub. Democratic Club.

Police Chief Frank Jordan con-curred with the OCC's findings, charging Casillas and Kidd with neglect of duty and Dean and neglect of duty and budget McCoy with engaging in conduct which tends to subvert the good which tends to subvert the good order, efficiency or discipline of the department or which reflects discredit upon the department'' as well as the charge of neglect brought against the other two of-

All four officers had been assigned to investigate the murder of George Smoot, stabbed with a butcher knife by a 17-year-old neighbor.

Dean and his partner, McCoy, were especially charged with failure to collect any evidence regarding the juvenile suspect after having been informed that the homicide victim was homosexual.

Casillas and Kidd were accused, among other charges, of not having the crime scene investiga-tion unit take any photographs of the suspect's home.

Library Fund Cuts Threaten Collection

Branch Houses Gay Collection: Service Cuts To Meet Deficit

Mayor Art Agnos has asked for a 5 percent cut in the $18 million budget for the San Francisco Public Library system. This is particularly distressing to members of the Lesbian and Gay Advisory Board for the Harvey Milk Branch on 16th Street. This branch distinguishes itself from the others with its well-stocked collection of lesbian and gay literature. The group has asked the mayor and library commission to spare the branch.

The Gay/Lesbian Advisory Committee in a March 9 letter to the mayor and Steven Coulter, openly gay president of the library commission, protested the "disastrous repercussions on the quality of services" that the proposed budget cut would have on the Harvey Milk Library. They referred to the bond issue that voters passed which was supposed to allocate funds to support the libraries.

The Harvey Milk Branch Library faces fund cuts.

This chart is excerpted from the March 16, 1989 Nature paper on AIDS incubation in San Francisco homosexual males by UC-San Francisco researchers at San Francisco General Hospital.

Fitted and Projected AIDS Incidence, SF Gay Men 150

HIV positive findings dropped to less than 50 a month from an estimated monthly high of 450 for the peak period in mid-1982. This finding was corroborated by a similar downward turn in rectal gonnorhea reported in the San Francisco gay male community at that time.

The reason, said Bacchetti, is that there appears to have been a major change in gay men's sexual behavior.

The study indicates that the number of new AIDS cases is already leveling off. It predicts that reported cases will begin dropping by as much as 15 per-cent by the end of 1991 and will continue to decline significantly in San Francisco gay men.

A flattening in AIDS incidence rates in homosexual males has also been noted in New York and Los Angeles, the researchers pointed out.

Bacchetti and Moss's findings were not going undisputed. Critics were calling their contentions premature and questionable.

Pat Christen, of the San Francisco AIDS Foundation, said she thought the UC results were a "premature conclusion."

"The concern I have is that they are basing their conclusions on cases reported in late 1988 and early 1989. But there is a lag in reporting new cases. In six or eight months, we'll have the complete numbers on the last six months to see."

Dr. George Lemp, epidemiologist for the San Francisco Health Department, told Bay Area Reporter, "New AIDS cases won't peak this year. We're currently in a period of a long plateau in cases and we think they may peak in the early to mid-1990s and then decline."

Lemp said one reason for the different prognoses is that the UC study used a lower figure for estimating gay men who are in fected with HIV. He said the city estimates that there are 27,000 infected gay men in San Francisco. The UC study used a figure of

He estimated that the current rate of 125 new cases each month—100 of those in gay men—will continue for the near

According to Lemp, the long incubation period for HIV makes it "very difficult" to predict the future course of the epidemic. "We may know the peak only several years after it occurs," he

Bacchetti and Moss actually Bacchetti and Moss actuary increased the incubation period for HIV to 9.8 years, an increase of two to three years, they said, over standard predictions. A study Lemp did last year, how-ever, extended the period to 11

The UC study predicts that within 9.8 years of infection, half of those infected will develop one of the diseases that defines clinical AIDS.

One of the reasons for the longer incubation period and leveling off of new cases could be the rise in early intervention

Martin Delaney, of Project In-form, said he found the UC study conclusions "not surprising."

"With earlier treatments, we're slowing down the number of people moving on to AIDS,"

Lemp agreed that early in-tervention "could affect the data" and "could be useful in preventing progression to full blown AIDS."

But, he added, there were no definitive studies to show that happening yet.

Even if the plateau that Lemp sees continues or if the rate of new cases begins to decline, the epidemic is far from over.

"We still need to be concerned with services," said Lemp.
"People will be living longer.
The number of people alive at any one time will increase." His office estimated a doubling of the number of people needing ser-vices for AIDS in the next few

"We're building a greater reservoir of people who will re-quire care in the long run," said Delaney. "We need to start think-ing about the economics of keep-ing them out of the category of AIDS."

He predicted that new treatments and the costs of making those treatments available on an equitable basis will be the next round in the AIDS battle. "People who are well off and well in-sured are benefitting from sured are benefitting from treatments. But there are plenty of impoverished people with AIDS out there," said Delaney, "and I'm not sure they're all benefitting."

Pat Christen cited another problem with the numbers game of predictions, about the AIDS epidemic. She feared "a real risk of relapse in gay men who have made behavior changes." Unless those changes are maintained, "we'll see the rate of new infections go up."

She praised efforts to reach out to new groups facing AIDS but cautioned against presuming the disease has run its course in the gay community. "There's a dangerous message there that we can forget about this community because they've taken care of themselves," she said.

Bacchetti and Moss caution against such use of their study and state that their results do no warrant any decrease in established AIDS services.

In their study, they used blood specimens from three San Francisco based studies of homosex-ual men: a hepatitis B vaccine trial begun in 1978, and homo-sexual male volunteers who agreed to be followed for incidence of HIV infection and development of AIDS from the San Francisco General Hospital Cohort Study, begun in 1983, and the San Francisco Men's Health Study, begun in 1984. They also used data on new AIDS diagnoses from the San Francisco Department of Public Health.

From Lily to Dances to Leather, Holiday Weekend Is Full of Fun

Lily Street Fair set for Easter finery this Sunday.

The Easter weekend, for some strange reason, has always been a time when San Francisco's gay community plans event after event. You can go to church, dance, party in one of several alleys and even take in one of several bar parties.

by Allen White

Ms. International Leather contest, in its third year, goes grand and elegant on Friday night. Doors open for the Black Elegance Ball at 8 p.m., with the dance starting at 9 p.m. at the San Franciscan Hotel at Eighth and Market streets.

The dress is formal, though leather is accepted. Media spokesperson Pat Califia comments, "This is your night if you've ever wanted to wear top hat and leather." Tickets are $10 at the door.

Saturday night is the contest to determine the new Ms. International Leather. Doors open for the event at 7 p.m. with the show starting at 8 p.m. The location for the event is the San Franciscan Hotel. The winner will represent leatherwomen at events worldwide and assist in promotion of a positive image for women in leather. They are also committed to raising funds to fight AIDS.

Tickets for the Ms. International Leather finals are $25 per seat and $15 for standing room. Advance sales have been closed and any tickets still available will be on sale at the door.

The White Party, certainly one of the traditions of gay San Francisco, begins at 9:30 p.m. This year, the producers of Crew and Hero will join forces. The DJs are Tom Johnson from the Probe in Los Angeles for after 2 a.m. and the Crew's Dave Moss for the early evening. As it has been for over a decade, The White Party will be presented at 520 Fourth St. The price is $10 in advance with tickets on sale at all San Francisco Headlines locations. Tickets are $15 at the door.

On Friday night, Kimo's bar presents Tommi Rose and Inga. There will be two shows at 10 p.m. and 11:30 p.m. Admission is $5.

and II:30 p.m. Admission is $5.

On Saturday, March 25, the Galleria will be the site of a benefit for National Gay Rights Advocates' Legal Defense Fund. But it will also be a chance to honor AIDS caregivers and have a good time dancing as well. The event is called "From the Heart." The evening starts with a cocktail reception ($125) which honors eight individuals as well as the group known as Volunteers of Service through Touch. If you can't attend the reception, there will be a five-hour dance party ($20) at 9 p.m.

The Metropolitan Community Church of San Francisco will begin an Easter Vigil at 10:30 p.m. at its 150 Eureka St. church. It concludes at midnight with holy communion. The candlelight service includes chanting and special choral music. Further information is at 863-4434.

The Golden Gate Business Association Easter brunch is at noon at Charpe's Grille, 131 Gough St. The brunch will be priced at $14 including tax and tip.

Starting at just about the same time is the annual Lily Street Easter Fair. Each year Lily Street, which is an alley near Octavia and Oak, is converted into the strangest of Easter events. There will still be an Easter bonnet contest and it should again be quite the show. Every year it is a delight. It is free and the only purpose for the party is so those that attend can have a good time.

Afternoon partying starts at 4 p.m. in the Garden Patio at the El Rio, 3158 Mission St., with entertainment by the Blazing Redheads. Admission is $7. The Easter Dreamland dance starts at 6 p.m. with music by DJ Mark Watkins. The admission is $3.

The annual Tenderloin Tessie Holiday Dinner Program will begin at 2 p.m. with their free Easter dinner. This year the feast will be served at the St. Paulus Church, Gough and Eddy Streets. Anyone is welcome to attend.

Needle Exchange Urged To Slow Epidemic in IV Users

Other Cities Exchanging Clean Needles For Users; Black Leaders Protest Lack of Input

Members of Prevention Point argue for needle exchange at public forum.

by Allen White

The practice of legally exchanging needles to protect drug addicts from the AIDS virus may soon become the public policy of the city of San Francisco. That is a goal the San Francisco AIDS Foundation and others are now actively working to achieve. Last Friday the foundation presented a forum with representatives from several cities in the country where there is now a needle exchange program. There was also the appearance of members of Prevention Point, a group which has been illegally exchanging needles on the streets of San Francisco.

In opening the forum, Tim Wolfred, director of the AIDS Foundation, said, "We are at an important crossroads in the fight to slow the spread of HIV among the city's IV drug using population. Although this is a sensitive issue, with legal obstacles, we must remember that these are extraordinary times which require extraordinary actions."

Pat Christen, director of public health policy for the AIDS Foundation, said, "I think what we are seeing is increasing public support for such a policy and that indicates to me that we will, at some point, see a needle exchange program in San Francis-

To state that case, five people from across the country made comments. Dave Purchase, a former drug counselor in Tacoma, began his needle exchange program in August 1988. That program now serves approximately 3,000 IV drug users and 20,000 needles have been exchanged on a one-for-one basis since the program began. He exchanges needles on a downtown street corner at a card table. He will exchange up to 10 needles at a time along with condoms, bottles of bleach and information about IV prevention.

Portland, Ore., began a needle exchange program in June 1988. To start the program they received a grant of $67,000 from the American Foundation for AIDS Research. In that state drug users can buy clean needles for 45 cents, though it is believed that pharmacies often discourage user's patronage.

Anne Guilfoile of the Boulder County, Colo., Health Department told of their program. It began last month, is publicly funded, and is modeled after the Tacoma effort. In Colorado it is legal to sell needles and syringes to anyone, but distribution to known IV drug users is prohibited by state drug paraphernalia laws. There, the district attorney has agreed not to prosecute health department personnel for distributing needles.

Chuck Eaton and Sam Friedman of New York City spoke of the needle exchange program in that city. Three quarters of the IV drug related AIDS cases come from the New York City area.

New York City health officials said that their program began in November 1988 and participation has been low. Only two drug users enrolled the first day.

"We set up the forum with a very specific immediate goal," said Christen. "That was to hear people who had actual needle exchange programs. Step two is to get a lot of community involvement. Step three will be to move forward and try to build consensus on this issue to see if there should be a program in place."

In San Francisco the program is not without its critics. Black Health Commissioner Naomi Gray is critical of the initial efforts because of the lack of input from the black community. "Do they think we are still on the plantation," she said. "Give me a break. Did you see that panel, no one black person was to be seen."

Christen defended the makeup of the panel. "I think that the issue is that the needle exchange forum was to hear from people who had set up exchange programs in their cities. That is why these people were brought in," she said.

As a member of the Health Commission, Gray also noted that the exchange of needles is illegal.

Agreeing, Christen counters that, "If it is illegal and should be done, let us change the law."

Christen also said, "When I asked Commissioner Gray about her argument regarding people of color she dismissed Prevention Point because they were doing illegal work. She also said that just because they had black and Latino people involved doesn't mean they speak for community."

Prevention Point is a group of volunteers who have taken the issue into their own hands.

Gray said she will endorse nothing and vote for nothing uncontinued on page 12

oving The Sinner, Hating The Sin

ne-third of all AIDS cases in the U.S. are now reported to be drug related, according to figures from the federal Centers for Diseas Control. That figure represents a jump from 26 percent of all cases in 1987. The CDC counted up all drug users—gay, straight, bisexual—in arriving at this estimate. The point is: we are facing a second AIDS epidemic. This one could be more challenging than the first.

The rise of AIDS in drug users is a serious and complex problem. The population is far more diffused, less organized, and more difficult to reach than was the gay community that suffered the first wave. Many of the drug users most at risk are the hardest to educate. They are frequently homeless, poor, suffer from any number of other ailments, and likely have such damaged self-esteem they aren't likely to take drastic measures to save their own lives. This is not to express contempt for them-it is simply facing an unpleasant de facto situation.

While the gay community rallied with support groups for all phases of fighting the epidemic, community connections among drug users are much weaker. But this society cannot just abandon people even if they appear to have abandoned themselves. Society itself has an enormous stake in meeting this growing new aspect of the AIDS epidemic.

vay or another we will all pay for whatever is done or not done about the problem. One step to alleviate the problem is clean needle exchanges for those who persist in using needle drugs. It is not an ideal solution—in fact it is not really a solution at all. It is merely a stop-gap measure to try to stem the rate of infection.

By itself, needle exchange is worthless. But the empty-headed moralizing about its evils is worse. We face in the debate over needles the same sort of objections we saw in the debate over condoms and promotion of their use. We'd better do something to face the immediate crisis and then later we'll have some time to tackle the root problems. Maybe an answer to some opponents would be that we can love the sinner while hating the sin.

To call distribution of needles to drug users the equivalent of genocide for the black community is ludicrously overblown rhetoric intended to short circuit rational debate. Drug abuse in America is no more strictly a black problem than is AIDS only gay. Drug abuse exists across the nation in all races and classes. Nobody owns the issue. No group of people is to be singled out for bearing an undue burden for it. If drugs have taken a special toll in the black community, it is in the same way that AIDS has claimed, at this point, most of its victims from the gay community. Segregation of social or health problems by minority status is no way to treat the real problem.

Those working in the field of combatting AIDS among drug users have said that free needle exchange has been for some addicts the first nave said that tree needle exchange has been for some addicts the first step toward recovery. It is a first step toward repairing the damaged self-esteem that leads many into drug use. And it is a first positive contact between agencies treating drug abuse and the people they should be serving. It is a means of establishing contact with users in a way that gains their confidence. It is a step toward full treatment. gains their confidence. It is a step toward full treatment.

Two problems exist to frustrate this goal, however. First, California law makes it illegal to possess hypodermic needles without a prescription. Before any agencies can freely distribute needles, the state legiswill have to amend the law. That will probably not be easy. Just as AIDS hysteria did not lead to, but in fact hindered, rational responses to the epidemic, the current drug hysteria will not necessarily product anything better on this issue.

Secondly, if this society is serious about treating the root issue and really tackling the drug problem, money for drug treatment programs will have to be greatly increased. To urge drug users to get into treatment and then have nowhere for them to go will serve no purpose. It

No quick and easy solutions exist for drug abuse or AIDS or the connection between the two. Only difficult choices are out there and we will have to choose from among the imperfect. Initiating clean needle exchanges would be a step in the right direction.

OPINION

Take On Underlying Challenges

by Caitlin Ryan, on winning the National Social Worker of the Year Award from the National Association of Social Workers

m truly honored by this award and thank you for this validation. I have mixed feelings about being so acknowledged for doing my job as a social worker—the job that so many of us have undertaken with great courage and commitment during this epidemic. For the work that I and so many others have done, is what social workers are supposed to do. That's part of what makes us different from anybody else.

It's ironic for me to be selected as a Social Worker of the Year, because I almost didn't become a social worker—not because I didn't want to, but because I almost didn't have the opportunity.

Nine years ago, I first applied to social work school as an older applicant with a great deal of experience, much of it in community organizing and development. Along with other accomplishments, I talked about the National Lesbian and Gay Health Conference that I organized in 1979. I talked about organizing regional and national networks of sensitive and informed lesbian and gay providers, and publishing the National Gay Health Directory. My academic record and references were excellent. But I was rejected from both schools of social work that I initially applied to—I was an open lesbian.

ou might ask why bring this up now? It's really not relevant anymore. It wouldn't happen today. Or you might say, why include those issues, anyway in an application to social work school? Why mention being gay? Some of you might even say that it's not appropriate. And some people have. But my identity is much more than my sexuality. My identity is all of who I am.

And who I am has everything to do with my getting this award, with my capacity to take risks, with my commitment to social work values and to social change. My experience of being a lesbian has allowed me to identify with difference and discrimination—with the very essence of our work as change agents and advocates.

That experience has fueled my work over the last 12 years in the gay and lesbian community. It has motivated every facet of my work with AIDS, my work with public policy and systems change. It has given me the courage to challenge our social work institutions when I felt that they were lethargic in responding to this devastating crisis. And it has given me the capacity to challenge myself.

As with racism, the roots of homophobia run very deep. And the cost is very dear. The cost of homophobia is paid by social workers who still live in fear of discovery of who they are, or by others who feel that their choices are limited to being accepted as a "professional" or being labeled inappropriate for sharing their lives as openly as their heterosexual colleagues. How many times have you heard someone say: "Why bring that up in a professional context? It's unnecessary..." So we tell people to compartmentalize and then expect them to lead healthy, integrated lives.

The cost is paid by our clients and students who search for open les-bian and gay role models and often fail to find them, by gay men and lesbians at risk for violence and for discrimination in employment, housing, education, child custody, health care ecrecy places our clients at risk for HIV infection and keeps them from coming forward for services when they are fearful and desperately in need. Secrecy keeps some of our clients with AIDS from coming out or sharing their diagnosis with families and friends, and then dying unattended and alone. Secrecy keeps their families in isolation, afraid of telling their closest friends or clergy the truth about their pain. Secrecy—homophobia—robs us of our choices, of the joy of being validated for who we truly are, not just who people think we are. And who we are is very relevant.

It's time for social work to take on the underlying challenges of AIDS—by confronting our own homophobia, our racing, our complacency. As AIDS increasingly becomes the disease of the powerless and the poor, we must reaffirm the values and the mission of our founder, openly with acceptance and pride, for all of what we are.

I am so very proud of the vital work we have done and so very proud to be a social worker. Thank you for your love and support and especially for your validation.

Well, Fiddle-Te-Dee

★ Consciousness and bigotry are words slung around like arrows at an amateur archery contest. They often fall short of the mark. Our people, the les-bian and gay community, have often been the object of stereotype dumping. It is even worse when one of our own does it to us.

Mr. David Perry's opinion article in B.A.R.'s March 2 issue displayed much of the same lack of con-sciousness and overt bigotry as he claimed was represented in the symbols he was denouncing. A group of people that make up a significant portion of this country, a classic book and movie and a good cause for fundraising (The San Francisco Band Foun-dation) were all castigated and stereotyped as supporting and condoning fascism in this day and time.

Well, fiddle-te-dee, dear sir. Not all Southerners are members of the Ku Klux Klan. I really doubt Scarlett O'Hara was—she didn't have any use for their plain white drapes!

As a Southerner, a Texan and a lesbian, I protest As a Southerner, a lexan and a lesbian, I protest the inherent bigotry and stereotyping of myself and those like me when it fits someone's cause to use their own narrow definitions of the above and of the San Francisco gay community. The condemnation of all things Southern as racist and conservative and Klanoriented is not different than saying all Germans are Nazis, all Russians are Communist or all homosexusles are needless; interest of the service o uals are needlepointers.

Let the arrows hit their true mark, Mr. Perry. The Let the arrows hit heir true mark, Mr. Perry. The individuals who support bigotry and oppression, regardless of which side of the contest they are on, are not usually representative of a whole people. When you and others like you practice their own form of bigotry and condemn an entire group of people because of a perceived connection, you give the opbecause of a perceived connection, you give the op-pressors more than they could have hoped for on their own time schedules. They suddenly appear larger, and more grim and powerful than they really might be. The fear produced by such a perceiption reduces hope and resistance to oppression. The perception of power draws many to it on that basis alone. The old safety in numbers, a perceived majority view-point, feeds the would-be oppressors like gasoline feeds a fire, regardless of how or what started that fire.

Mr. Perry, one cannot deny that stereotyping is a powerful and dangerous element of bigotry, regardless of who does the stereotyping. Your regardless of who does the stereotyping. Your misplaced sense of outrage, your stereotyping of all things Southern and antiquated flag as part of an inherent evil present in our society today, dumped on some very fine people who do a lot for this community—a community that you don't seem to think too highly of. The Band Foundation and its supporters that I know (including myself) are not racist, not all white not white supremotive realistic. not all white, not white supremacist, not selfish or generally thoughtless people. They are just regular folks, like most of us, not saints but not sinners in the major leagues.

Regulations Needed

★ The opinion piece in the B.A.R. March 9 was 120 percent on target ("Fundraisers Need City")

Anyone who is making bucks from AIDS, making fundraisers not what they seem must have regulations to force them to be 120 percent honest. How on earth can we be so trusting?

No matter if it's a fundraiser or a Savings & Loan—anything that involves money must be watched very closely.

Let's get some stiff regulation on all AIDS fundraisers.

Brainwashed

 \bigstar I see no hope with the Bush/Quayle administration. I predict this so-called new president will be impotent, as well as have a do-nothing administration.

Since Reagan took office, I've noticed the Republican party has gotten from bad to rotten, and racist. Most of your Robber Barons, Corporate Raiders, Neo-Nazis, Klan and Anti-People, and Anti-Labor (let's bust the unions) have now come under the umbrella of the Republican party.

The brainwashed dumb American people are living in some kind of fantasy bubble, that sooner or later will burst, and when it does it will be social and economic and environmental chaos.

Other Minorities

★ When Mayor Agnos named David Gilmore (who is white) as executive director of the San Francisco Housing Authority, he drew criticism from Lulann McGriff, head of the local NAACP, and Julianne Malveaux, president of the Black Leadership Forum.

They complained of other minorities (gay, women, Vietnamese, Filipino, and Chinese) competing for top city positions. Malveaux finds it ironic that the mayor can't find any black department heads, most in City Hall are filled with anglos.

As the position at issue has been held by a black As the position at issue has been held by a black for the past 22 years I find her comments surprising and somewhat bitter. Blacks aren't the only minorities living in public housing projects and to appoint someone to the position just because they are black is also discrimination. Let's give another minority a chance. They certainly couldn't mess it up any further.

 \bigstar The Alice B. Toklas Lesbian/Gay Democratic Club would like to extend the club's thank you for your efforts in reinstating the original language of A.B. 1 in Assembly Member Terry Friedman's bill, A.B. 84.

Your responsiveness to the concerns we expressed about A.B. 84 during our meeting several weeks ago is greatly appreciated. We think that specific legislative language outlawing discrimination based on sexual orientation is extremely important in the society-wide struggle for lesbian and gay rights.

A.B. 1, as originally introduced by Art Agnos, is significant piece of legislation for our community. as spinican piece of regislation for our community. We thank you for your continuing efforts in ensuring that A.B. 84 embodies the spirit and language of A.B. 1. Rubbed Wrong Way

★ I feel a sense of obligation to send this letter to help steer people away from one of the masseurs that regularly advertises in the BAR. One of his ads he goes by the name Ron, the blond Canadian. He often has three or four ads under different names and with different phone numbers. He's got the scam down well. In the last few weeks he has blown up his picture (it's the large one of a reclining man in tank top) in an attempt to lure new massage clients into his unskilled, incapable hands and grim personality. I doubt he has any repeat customers and relies on first timers.

I had a massage from him and it was a very unplea-sant experience. I doubt he has any massage train-ing, he certainly doesn't care about the quality of his work or the comfort of his clients. His working space was cluttered, he acted like he was on speed, for some reason he kept repeatedly leaving the room and washing his hands (that's what it sounded like) and answered the phone many times throughout the massage. During the massage he bitched and com-plained about everything under the sun.

The clincher was a puppy barking in the next room. He finally brought the dog out and asked if I wanted it, because he was sick of it and the last one he accidentally killed when he hit it, he said. And this guy is massaging me!

I have talked to a number of other people who have had similar, unpleasant experiences at his hands, and have taken it upon myself to warn the community about him. As someone who loves a great massage, and has had many from advertisers in the BAR, this man doesn't deserve your business. Unfortunately, he gives the whole business of massage a bad name. Get a look at his picture in this issue, because after this letter he will undoubtedly remove the ad and use

★ The threat to gay people from the far right of the * The threat to gay people from the far right of the political spectrum has grown throughout the 1980s. Groups such as the KKK, skinheads, religious fundamentalists, right wing politicians and even the clergy of the Roman Catholic church have increasingly opposed our functioning as homosexuals. In addition we gay people have also had to combat the most devastating disease mankind has ever known, AIDS.

All this turmoil is both physically and mentally exhausting and we look for solace from wherever we might find it. However, as an overreaction to all of this we gays must not be enticed by the far left of the spectrum and become identified with it. Our fate ould be no better in the hands of Communists than fascists. Stalin was no better than Hitler

The Castro regime in Cuba has put all HIV ositive people into detention camps and God only knows what happens to them when they develop AIDS. Moreover, Communism is a discredited polit-ical, social and economic system which is beginning to decline all over the world because it isn't successful on any level.

Powerful Symbol

The following was sent to the San Francisco

★ Mark Z. Barabak's "How a Bar Riot in N.Y. Began the Gay Revolution" (March 13) did a fine job of re-counting the legend of the Stonewall Riots, but it falters both factually and critically as an attempt at not start the 'gay revolution.' The social changes your reporter traces are the result of forces broader, more complicated, and of much longer duration than any single event.

any single event.

One example of the article's erroneous "beforeand-after" historiography is its assertion that no states had ""consenting adult' laws protecting private sexual activities from government intrusion" before the 1969 riots. In fact, the state of Illinois adopted a model penal code that decriminalized sodomy in 1961. Connecticut followed suit in the month preceding the supposedly seminal bar uprising.

Unlike several other civil disturbances in the 1960s, the Stonewall Riots themselves appear to have brought about no direct changes in governmental policy or broad public opinion. In fact, at the time it occurred, the events passed largely unnoticed beyond the gay community in New York. As one witness I interviewed told me, "It wasn't a phenomenon then, it was just a big riot?"

This is not to deny the historical significance of the Stonewall Riots, but rather to locate that significance precisely in their function as a symbolic "phenomenon." The riots served neatly to represent values and experiences central to the construction of the gay community—among them the spon-taneous assertion of individual dignity, and the dynamic combination of humor, theater and anger into political protest.

Radical gay activists in 1969 seized on the Stonewall Riots as a political symbol for these very reasons. And the event has remained a powerfully motivating element of gay folklore not because it "began the gay revolution," but because the echoes negan the gay revolution," but because the echoes of that warm summer night in New York still sound across two decades in the struggle lesbian and gay people today wage to escape fear, to come out, and to lead lives of dignity.

Stonewall

* As a transplanted New Yorker, I must correct two inaccuracies in Allen White's story on the Stonewall Rebellion, the 20th anniversary of which will be celebrated in June.

The police raid on the Stonewall Inn on Christopher Street in Greenwich Village actually took place on Saturday, June 28, 1969, not Friday, June 27, as he reported. The police launched their raid at 2 a.m. The first anniversary of the riot was commemorated on Sunday, June 28, 1970, and has been celebrated on the last Sunday in June ever since

And the riot that ensued the night of the raid lasted two hours, not the forty-five minutes White reported. Indeed, it was nearly dawn before things finally quieted down.

I also want to clear up what has been a glaring omission about Stonewall. The drag queens who fre-quented the Stonewall Inn were predominantly African Americans (the new term for blacks) and Who's Threatening Whom?

★ Question of the day: What local clergyman so fervently lusts for a scarlet Cardinal's cap that he would slander an entire group of San Francisco citizens in his quest for career advancement?

Archbishop John Quinn's assertions this past week Archoishop John Quinn's assertions this past week in Rome that the American family is "assailed" by a "panorama of sin" such as the "growing efforts to legalize 'marriages' between persons of the same sex" is a clear and unequivocal attack on the gay community. Pray tell, what twisted logic allows otherwise intelligent people to conclude that homosexuals are a threat to the institution of the family? I've known large numbers of families to be a very real threat to their homosexual relatives, but I have seldom encountered the reverse.

Adding to the absurd air of the Vatican pro-ceedings, one of Quinn's colleagues even went so far as to suggest that birth control leads to homosexuality as a way of life. Now that is a real piece of contorted logic if ever I heard one! Other opinions expressed by the esteemed Roman church leaders are equally preposterous. For example the gentlemens' warped observations on the subject of women were par-ticularly patronizing and offensive.

Disappointing

★ I am a costume designer in Los Angeles but have also lived and worked in San Francisco. In many ways my heart remains in San Francisco and I retain active ties to performers and organizations there; although in this case I speak independently of them.

On Saturday, March 4, I attended the Cable Car Awards ceremony as I have done occasionally in the past, but I was so disappointed that I felt compelled to tell someone. In the most generic sense I suppose it was a fine evening, but as one who comes to San Francisco for the entertainment that is uniquely San Franciscan—eelectic, intelligent and out of the main-Franciscan—eclectic, intelligent and out of the main-stream—I felt the evening was lacking. The building was pleasant and attractive, and the entertainme was, at times, pleasant and attractive, and the chromatoms was, at times, pleasant and attractive, but I kept thinking I could as easily have been in Orange County somewhere or watching a Merv Griffin re-run.

It seems a shame to me that in what was obviously an effort to produce a slick, more mainstream "television" show the unique qualities of your performing community have been sacrificed.

"The mayor has asked for this cut, if he needs it," explained branch librarian Florence Mitchell. "This is one of those slippery things that can't really be pinned down." She said that rather than close branches, services will be out. vices will be cut

The Library Commission has proposed to the mayor cuts in the services at the Milk branch that would mean retaining only a halftime children's librarian

Mitchell said that such a cut would affect the gay/lesbian library collection. Acquisition of new books, for example, would be cut down. Because the children's librarian presently helps out with the adults' librarian and other professionals at the branch, the result would be virtually a 25 percent cut in staff.

"Currently there are two librarians, one for adults and one for children," Mitchell said. "If they cut one in half we will have that many fewer people to deal with both the children and the

The staff has already been trimmed down to three full-time people and three part-time col-lege students, plus a library technician.

No specific action has been taken yet because Agnos has not made any decisions as to what cuts will be made. Mitchell predicts no action or changes un-til June of this year.

The Milk branch has been urging patrons to write the mayor and tell him they want to keep status quo at that branch, and to find a way around cutting the budget there.

Mitchell referred to the city's budget cutting method as the King Solomon's baby syndrome, in which if you cut the baby in half to please both mothers, the child dies and no one wins. The budget is so tight in the city that each service is up in arms at the suggestion of cuts in their area.

"We've been doing this for quite a few years, and it's getting thinner and thinner around here," said Mitchell. "Right now as long as there are enough of us we can run the library—a little bit thinner. But when we get down to thinnest, then that's it." She said further cuts at this point could cost the system more to implement than they could save.

She pointed out that with any further staff cuts there would be no leeway for an employee to take sick leave. With the prospective budget changes, if one member were absent from illness, the library would have to close until that librarian was able to return

She said that the Milk library has already cut off their Monday nas already cut off their Monday morning hours in an attempt to cut corners financially. A sugges-tion was made to instill a policy of selective closing hours.

The Committee argued that the gay/lesbian collection housed there makes the branch particularly visible and serves a vital function in promoting gay pride in a diverse neighborhood.

"The gay and lesbian collec-tion is, itself, an important state-ment for and about the San Fran-cisco Public Library's commitcusco Public Library's commit-ment to serving the varied needs of this diverse city,' said the group's letter. Practically every seat in the room was filled, including many gay activists, due to the highly controversial nature of the case.

The attorneys for the accused stated that this case involved hundreds of documents necessary for evidence, several of which were requested from and subsequently denied by the city attorney's office and the OCC.

Attorney Michael Gash of the San Francisco Police Depart-ment, management control divi-sion, argued that the subpoenas were issued late in the day just before the hearing was to commence, not enough notice to comply with their request. He also stated that the requests were "too broad, extraneous, and unnecessary."

Publication Lists Campus Bias Policies

The Campus Project of the National Gay & Lesbian Task Force (NGLTF) has released a publication outlining strategies for gay and lesbian activists to organize and lesbian activists to organize for non-discrimination policies on campus. Authored by Campus Project Director Kevin Berrill and former NGLTF volunteer Sam Paul, the publication is entitled "Making It Official: Organizing For A Policy to 2nd Discrimination," and is contained in Organizing For Equality, the newsletter of the NGLTF Campus Project. Campus Project.

The new NGLTF publication lists colleges and universities that have non-discrimination policies covering sexual orientation dis-crimination. It highlights suc-cessful organizing efforts on several campuses and outlines for activists the mechanics of changing campus policies.

Copies of "Making It Official" may be ordered by sending $1 to NGLTF Campus Project, 1517 U Street NW, Washington DC 20009. The two earlier issues of the Campus Project newsletter may also be ordered for $1 each.

Fighting For His Life

his is a stupid, insane act.
But it's a stupid, insane world, and you've got to do crazy things like this to get people to pay attention to the plight we're facing." This is how Stuart McDonald describes the hunger strike he began on Jan. 2 to push the governor of California to support anti-discrimination laws gay people and people with AIDS and ARC.

McDonald, 33, has experience ed a great deal of stupidity and insanity in his life. Raised in a small town ten miles south of Salt Lake City, he left home at age 19 to escape "years of Mormon indoctrination" and a family that doctrination" and a family that refused to accept independent thinking. Three years later, his parents found out he was gay and told him they agreed with every-thing Anita Bryant was doing. Furthermore, they wished he had never been born.

After graduating from the University of Utah in 1978, McDonald moved to San Francis-McDonald moved to San Francisco and eventually enrolled in law school at Hastings. However, after graduating from Hastings in 1985 in the top half of his class and passing the bar exam in 1986, he could not get a job, despite sending out more than 1,000 copies of his resume. McDonald blames this on his frank disclosure of his ARC con-dition. He suffers from chronic fatigue, yeast infections, psoriasis and lympadenopathy. "Because I got sick in law school and collapsed two weeks before the bar exam," he explains, "I knew I could not handle the extensive overtime required of a beginning attorney. So I stated that in the cover letter. As a result, I had to deal with all the AIDS hysteria and paranoia out there.

'Anti-gay discrimination was "Anti-gay discrimination was the other reason I couldn't get a job. Practicing law is one of the most homophobic professions there is. In most firms, gay peo-ple can come out only after they've gotten their foot in the door. That's why no one would take the gay law class which was offered at Hastings; it would have shown up on their transcripts."

iscrimination is the main reason McDonald began his hunger strike earlier this year, but it is not the only one. In May, 1988, his lover of five years, Kirby Lavoy Thompson, a computer programmer analyst for Wells Fargo, died of AIDS. Many of McDonald's other friends had died or were dying as Furthermore, states McDonald, "I couldn't walk outside the apartment without the threat of violence due to the AIDS crisis. So I finally said, 'What the fuck. I'm not going to deal with this anymore. I've got to do some-

"I decided on a hunger strike because I thought most people in the gay and lesbian community had given up fighting for their civil rights, and I wanted to prompt them to start fighting again. After all, these things were happening not just to me but to other gay people as well."

McDonald admits that the action he has taken is an extreme measure and is not for everyone. "I would never encourage other people to do this," he says. "It's crazy. I never asked anyon crazy. I never asked anyone to support the strike itself. I just want them to support its goals. But who would listen to me other-wise? Who's been listening to the gay community about what's been going on? Sometimes you have to do extreme things, like risking your life, in order to achieve your goals."

Although the vast majority of people who have contacted him as a result of the strike have been supportive, many have been critical, not only of his methods but also of his motivation. He has been accused of "every negative motivation conceivable"—especially being a media junkie. One of the reasons for this is that McDonald has been writing let-ters to newspaper editors for

Explains McDonald, "Many Explains McDonald, "Many people read these letters and automatically dismiss me as someone who's only interested in getting attention. But let's face it: getting attention. But let's face it:
the letters to the editor section is one of the few forums we have,
and if other people aren't saying things that need to be said, then I will. Sure, I have a lot of opinions, but when I see evidence of discrimination or stupid, sloppy thinking that's hurting the community, then I've got to point it out."

McDonald has also been ac-McDonald has also been accused of insincerity. "That's bullshit, though," he says. "Those who have spent any time talking to me have found out that I'm not crazy. I'm articulate and sincere, and I'm doing this for the community as well as for myself. This isn't theoretical for myself. This isn't theoretical for myself. This isn't theoretical for myself. The same treating for my. me. I really am fighting for my life."

A lthough he claims to understand their points of view, McDonald expresses impatience with his critics. "Frankly, I'm getting pretty pissed off at people who are so com-placent that they've given up on getting the laws we need passed. It's easier for them to put pressure on me to stop the damn hunger strike than it is to write tters and to make phone calls I really think this could work if enough people in the gay com-munity would get behind it. We need to take individual responsibility and do something instead of complaining.

McDonald admits that he is McDonald admits that he is angrier than most people. This is why he has adopted such an ex-treme measure. "Yes, I'm angry. I have a damn good right to be. Who wouldn't be angry at the

There's nothing wrong with doing things out of anger as long as you think them through and as long as you aren't lashing out for the hell of it.

"I guess there are other ways to deal with the anger," McDonald acknowledges. "I'll be frank with you. Before I decided on this hunger strike, I considered other options—suicide, even assassination. For a while, I drank heavily in order to cope with the situation. But these were harmful, self-destructive paths. A hunger strike, for me, is a more constructive way of dealing with

The end result of an unanswered hunger strike, of course, is death. Although death is an everdeath. Although death is an ever-increasing possibility for McDonald, he does not seek it. "I don't want to die," he says. "Nobody works this hard to com-mit suicide. It's ridiculous. But if this is what it takes to get what I want, I will die. I'm not afraid. I've seen a lot of death. I'm ready."

Nevertheless, McDonald admits, "I'm clearly looking for a way out. I will call off the strike if any one of five conditions is

These involve getting Deukmejian, Wilson, Bush, a majority of state legislators, or a majority of U.S. legislators to support antidiscrimination laws for gay people and people with AIDS and ARC.

Unfortunately, McDonald is increasingly doubtful that any of these conditions will be met. But this doesn't mean he will have failed. "Simply by calling attention to these concerns, I will have being a department of the second tion to these concerns, I will have achieved something. If nothing else, the strike will have brought my family closer together. When they heard about it, my younger brother showed up at my front door to help, and my mother—who once told me she wished I was dead—asked Senator Hatch for his export. Gray also pointed to the program in New York City. It is her contention that the program there has not been successful be-cause there is no endorsement by the black community leaders AIDS Foundation material would tend to strengthen her argument. It says the New York City needle exchange program for the first month "found that 34 drug users had received 47 needles. The numbers have re-cently increased to 56 drug users who had received 76 needles."

The dialogue has now begun on what could become the most controversial issue surrounding the AIDS crisis since the closing of the bathhouses. She noted that except for the category of gay men, gay IV drug users represent the next highest at-risk group for AIDS in San Francisco.

No Dust On These Spurs As Cowboy Council Aims To Contribute

by Mary Richards

The wild west never look-The wild west never looked better, as cowgirls and cowpokes blazed a trail straight to the Corral last Saturday night to rustle up a drink, do a little foot stompin' and pick the first Mr. San Francisco Cowboy 1989.

I checked my spurs at the door and took in this old-time saloon that looks out over some tomb-stones of varmints who breathed their last. We all remember ole Jake Lance, the one who "died with his boots on and his pants off." Popular dude. And Big Dick who met a "bigger bullet."

The dancers were there, do-The dancers were there, do-see-do-in', right up to the time for the contest. The producer, St. Clair Adams, said they original-ly had six contestants, but some "quit because they got stage fright." This is a real butch group of wranglers!

A tall lady named Tatiana took over as emcee for St. Clair, who lost his voice. Tatiana appeared a mite big in those spiky heels, but seemed a right nice gal.

Brian Cornell was up first, all 6'4" of him, wearin' a floor-length duster the way those cowhands did to protect themselves against the elements. Suede leather chaps with fringe completed the job. No sun's goin' to set on this cowpoke!

Next contestant was Richard Mosler, nicknamed Salt "because I go out with a man named Pepper.' Now, there was a buckaroo with some sense.

Mark Fielder was the final en-try, and as handsome a cattleman as there ever was.

The contest was set up to be judged by five distinguished caballeros, whose votes would count on a 50 percent basis. The rest of the rustlers in the saloon got to put their 50 percent in, too. Every pair of spurs that entered that swinging door was given a voting card.

The judging over, and the roughriders were ready. Here's the vote: Richard Mosler, second runner up; Mark Fielder, first runner up; and Brian Cornell was declared Mr. San Francisco Cowboy 1989!

You can bet your britches there was some screamin', kissin' and a-huggin' goin' on after that announcement.

We sat our tired selves at the we sat our tired selves at the bar to sip a beverage, and who should we spy but Ileene MacAdam, the rightful owner of this here saloon. She sure was an elegant sight. Silver hair to match her diamonds, and lookin' just like she should, from the top of her cowgirl hat to the fringe of her high-heeled boots.

The tallest person in the bar was Mr. San Francisco Cowboy 1989, Brian Cornell. Brian has lived in this city most of his life, but he did stay 10 years on his grandfather's ranch in Merced County. He was proud to say that his grandfather was sheriff of his grandfather was sheriff of that county for 30 years.

Brian is active in the Gay Rodeo Association, and con-siders himself a cowboy who hap-pens to be gay. His lover of 14 years, Alberto, shares Brian's joy in the outdoors. Brian will leave his impressive trophy in the Corral bar. "I'm very proud to represent the city of San Francisco, and I promise I'm not going to let 'em down," he said.

St. Clair Adams, who produced the event, strolled by, and commented about the Cowboy Counreli of San Francisco, which has been in existence only for about two months. "We have 12 mem-bers," he said. "We basically plan functions. We all vote on the plan functions. We all vote on the issues and how we want to run something. If there is money to be donated by the council, we'll investigate who needs the money. We're hoping to donate close to $5,000-$10,000 a year (from events). I'm not sure how easy that's going to be, but that's our goal.'

Just as I was about to saddle up, owner Ileene MacAdam appeared again. Ileene purchased the property on Market Street and the bar came with it. The Corral is the third bar she's owned. "I like bars," she said. "I'm a night owl and I like parties and dancing.

Friends of Oscar Hold Annual Gala To Raise Funds for Three Charities

by Dennis McMillan

On Wednesday, March 29, the night of the 61st annual presentation of the Academy Awards, Friends of Oscar will hold its ninth annual black-tie gala at the San Francisco City Hall rotunda. The non-profit organization, which was recently presented an AIDS Emergency Fund outstanding contribution award, has raised over $180,000 for AIDS programs since 1986.

Honorary co-chairs Mayor Art Agnos and his wife Sherry and Rep. Nancy Pelosi anticipate over 1,000 movie afficionados will attend this festive event benefiting the S.F. AIDS Foundation Food Bank, Family Link, and Continuum: HIV Day Services.

The Food Bank provides groceries to AIDS/ARC patients who cannot otherwise afford to pay for food. In the coming year, the agency expects to distribute over 40,000 bags of groceries.

Family Link provides lodging in a safe, supportive environment for visiting loved ones of people with AIDS/ARC and other lifethreatening illnesses.

Continuum: HIV Day Services will open in June, providing culturally sensitive, supportive and therapeutic adult day health services for AIDS/ARC patients.

Because of the generosity of its many benefactors and sponsors, Friends of Oscar has completely underwritten all expenses for the gala. In this way, 100 percent of the $75 ticket price or additional contributions will go to the charities.

Special $800 reserved tables for eight are available on the mezzanine of the rotunda.

Beginning at 5:30 p.m. with the elegant piano music of Peter Mintun, the evening features the live broadcast of the Oscars ceremony visible on the multitude of screens placed throughout the rotunda.

The event will flow with champagne and other beverages from an open bar, and catering from 11 different outfits will please the palate with a sumptuous banquet of elegant and exotic foods.

Kile Ozier, chair of the gala event, spoke of the overwhelming group of supporters for the benefit. "Friends of Oscar supporters represent a cross-section of our community unlike any I've encountered in other charity events," he said. "The common denominator is the elvel of personal commitment and caring people are demonstrating."

Grand prizes, including a deluxe cruise for two on the Royal Cruise Line and a "Hollywood" weekend in San Francisco at the Portman Hotel, will be awarded to the winners who correctly predict the Oscar winners on healthst banded out

Last Dec. 19, Friends hosted the prestigious San Francisco premiere of Harvey Fierstein's Torch Song Trilogy, raising nearly $20,000 for AIDS charities. Although Friends has also premiered the movie Maurice and many other screenings, the Oscar-night gala remains the group's hallmark event.

Gay Lutherans Tell Church: Repent

Group Takes 'Aggressive Stance'; Calls Church Treatment 'Sinful'

by Gregory Douthwaite

A group of gay Lutherans has decided to go on the offensive instead of just waiting to respond to an assault from church authorities. Lutherans Concerned has issued a strongly worded document saying that it is not gays who are sinful but the church's treatment of gay people that is the real sin. They demand that the church repent its ways.

The document, titled "A Call for Repentence," was sent to all Lutheran bishops in the U.S. and Canada. It asks church leaders to "publicly repent," and demands that they meet with the group for "dialogue and action."

Lutherans Concerned has been trying to get the church to minister to the lesbian and gay community since its founding in 1074.

The group is "no longer willing to be ignored by the church," they said in a prepared statement

At a recent meeting in Toronto, the group decided the time had come to take a "more aggressive stance." With 1700 members in two countries, the group is planning highly visible protests at upcoming church conventions.

At a convention at the Oakland Hyatt next month, members will hold a 70-hour vigil with a cross and candles to alert delegates to their concerns, said the group's co-chair, Rev. Kathy Crary.

"They'd like to keep us quiet, but we're not children," said Crary, 37. "We've grown up as an organization and we have a right to be angry for the way we've been treated."

The church chastises gays, calling them sinners and telling them they can't have sex, Crary said. They are told to "change your ways to save your soul," and that AIDS is a punishment from God, she said.

It is the church which is actually the sinner, Crary explained. "Christ said, 'Love one another as I have loved you.' But the church's treatment of lesbians and gays in many places precludes love," she said.

Gay Lutherans who lose a lover through death or a break-up cannot turn to the church for consolation, Crary lamented. "The church should be a place where you can be out. It should be a place of joy."

Gay ministers are also forced to stay in the closet, Crary said. If they publicly come out, or their orientation is discovered, there is often a strong suggestion from the bishop that they leave the ministry, she said.

The church does have some openly gay ministers, but they are discriminated against, Crary said. Gay ministers are forced to take a vow of chastity, which straight ministers do not take, she said.

Crary is an ordained minister herself, but she refuses to take a vow of chastity. She has a longterm lesbian lover, and says she finds it unfair that only heterosexual ministers can marry.

Three gay Lutheran seminarians are also protesting their plight. The three completed their education at a Berkeley seminary last year, but have been denied ordination because they refused to remain silent about their sexuality. Lutherans Concerned is sending them on a speaking tour.

AIDS Groups Bring Topic to Black Mayors

by Allen White

A large march is being planned for Saturday, April 1 in Oakland to send a message to the black mayors in the United States. The National Black Mayors' Conference is set to begin that weekend in the East Bay city and these mayors are being charged, according to march organizers, with ignoring the AIDS crisis.

Gary Harmon, an ad hoc committee member of the People of Color Mobilizing Against AIDS, said, "The black mayors have virtually ignored the AIDS issues in their cities. What we ask them is to go home and raise the awareness level and the education level for people of color in their community and say, "Yes, AIDS can get you too."

The groups plan to assemble at the Lake Merritt BART station, near Laney College, at 11 a.m. on April 1. The march will begin at noon. The route will take the marchers two blocks west to Oak Street. There, they will turn and go five blocks to 14th Street. The march will then proceed up 14th Street to the Oakland City Hall will be a rally starting at 1:30 p.m. and continuing until 3:30 p.m.

The key to the success of the march will be the coalition's ability to attract black mayors to respond to the event. Across the country, the mayors of some of the largest cities are black. They include Tom Bradley of Los Angeles, Wilson Goode of Philadelphia, Marion Berry of Washington, D.C., Coleman Young of Detroit and Andrew Young of Atlanta.

The march comes at a time when the statistics regarding the AIDS crisis are beginning to move towards minorities, and especially the black community. Harman notes, "Black people are in the minority but they are fast becoming the majority with people who have AIDS."

Martin Scott Smith June 4, 1951-March 5, 1989

June 4, 1951-March 5, 1989
Martin died in Franklin Hospital less than four weeks after starting treatment for toxoplasmosis. It was a peaceful conclusion to the 30 months of good health that he had enjoyed since being diagnosed with pneumocystis. During that time he continually planned for things that he wanted to do and he did them.

In 1987 he participated in the group purchase of the apartment building which had been his home since moving to San Francisco in 1976. He enjoyed the spring wildflowers at Death Valley and the relaxed weeks at Sea Ranch with close friends and family. One of his greatest joys was being able to travel to Europe in 1987 and return to the Island of Elba.

Martin was an architect with Stone, Marraccini and Patterson, and previously had been a partner in the firm of Smith and Schraishuhn. He was born in Detroit and he graduated from the University of Michigan in 1975.

Martin is survived by his loving parents
Mr. and Mrs. Frank E. Smith of Birmingham, Michigan; brothers Barry E. Smith and Frank A. Smith of Ann Arbor; and his lover of eight years, Rex Vanard. A memorial service has been held.

Nicolas Toledano

On March 12, Nicolas Toledano died as he had wished: at home, comforted by the warmth and love of his family. He was diagnosed with the AIDS virus in 1985, and battled the disease's ill-nesses for the past three years.

Douglas Foy Nov. 15, 1950-March 17, 1989

Doug's sensi-tivity and gentle loving spirit were an inspiration to all who knew and loved him. While his illness altered his quality of life, he continued the battle and lived life to its fullest.

Doug grew up in North Carolina, and attended the University of North Carolina. He then moved to New York City where he began his career in finance. In 1981 he transferred to San Francisco, a city he came to love.

He is survived by his parents, Clara and Douglas, his sisters, Dot and Lorraine, his brother, sister-in-law and nephew, David, Vicki and Justin, all of North Carolina.

A private celebration of his life will be held at Mount Tamalpais on Sunday, March 26. For further information call Ira at 621-0151. In lieu of flowers please send donations in Doug's name to "Family Link," phone 346-0770.

Doug is survived by his lover, Mark Daniel Sweer, and many friends. Although Doug and Dan were together for only a year it was a year filled with intense growth both emotionally and spiritually. Shortly after meeting Dan in April of 1988 Doug was diagnosed with ARC. For Doug and Dan this intensified the importance of living each day to the fullest.

In his life Down

In his life Doug was considered the parent, uncle, brother and buddy to many. Both spiritually and literally Doug was known for providing the right answer at the right time. But at the time he met Dan he was looking for bigger answers to bigger questions which Dan helped him to find.

As a patriarch of the "bear" family, his death of complications from AIDS is indeed a sad event. Dan loved him dearly and ensured his passing was a truly digified and loving experience for the both of them. He will be missed by many.

At Dan's request, all memorials should be directed to the AIDS charity of your choice. A memorial service was held March 19, at Unity Church of Seattle. ▼

by Harold Fairbanks

LOS ANGELES—Poet, playwright, performance artist and teacher Scott Giantvalley, 39, died on March 2 of AIDS-related illnesses at the Chris Brownlie Hospice in Los Angeles. Memorial services were held March 12 at a private home and his ashes will be scattered at sea.

Survivors include life partner Gordon Blitz and his mother Nita of West Hollywood, parents Meredith and Jerome Giantvalley and sister Susan Baker, all of San Diego, sister Ann Giantvalley of Sand Point, Idaho, and several nieces and nephews. Memorial donations to the Chris Brownlie Hospice are suggested.

Born and raised in San Diego he received his Bachelor of Arts degree at Occidental College in degree at Occidental College in Los Angeles, a Master's degree in literature from California State University at Northridge and a doctorate from the University of Southern California. He had taught English composition courses at Cal State Dominguez Hills and schools in the Los Angeles Community College District, including L.A. South-west College and Pierce College.

A West Hollywood resident, Ciantvalley was a member of the Whitman-Brooks Institute, the Southern California Harvey Milk Lesbian & Gay Democratic Club, served on the West Hollywood Gay & Lesbian Task Force, was a facilitator of the men's rap group at the Gay & Lesbian Community Services Center in Hollywood 1979-84, and had been active in the early days of the Gay Student Union at USC. He contributed articles to Frontiers and The Edge and commentaries to the Being Alive newsletter, as well as A West Hollywood resident. His poems were published in a volume titled Apricot, and his plays The Wedding and The Fracture were produced at the Deja Vu in Hollywood during 1985 and 86, after his first play The Fair Lady Abroad had been presented at Cal State Northridge in 1973. He had completed a book on playwright Edward Albee for G.K. Hall, Inc., who had published his earlier tome on Walt Whitman, and it was published in November, 1987

After being diagnosed and hospitalized with AIDS in July, 1986, Giantvalley wrote and performed a one-man theatrical piece, Life After AIDS, a cele-bration of the joys and beauties of love, music, nature, poetry, humor, gay pride and selfhood, using his own works and those of other writers, as well as composers Scott Joplin and Jerome posers Scott Joplin and Jerome Kern, in a lively, entertaining and positive tribute to the human spirit. It was a rallying cry to other PWAs, that they should live their remaining time to the fullest and not resign themselves to a severely diminished lifestyle.

First presented at the Purple Stages Lesbian & Gay Theatre Festival that was a part of the 1987 Los Angeles Arts Festival, Giantvalley also took his performance piece to college campuses throughout Southern California and the Theatre Rhinocens. ceros in San Francisco, continually revising it to reflect the latest information about AIDS. Even though he was waging a constant battle against the disease, his Life After AIDS became less autobiographical and solemn, and more educa-tional in a witty, humorous and uplifting way.

Law Takes Effect To Ban AIDS Bias

The American Civil Liberties Union has urged AIDS advocacy groups around the country to take advantage of a new federal law which, effective March 12, prohibits discrimination in housing based on that diseas

The Fair Housing Amendments Act of 1988 bars discrimiments Act of 1908 bars discrimination against persons with disabilities including persons with AIDS and HIV infection. It applies to virtually all housing in the United States.

'This is a major breakthrough "This is a major breakthrough in stopping AIDS-related discrimination," said Nan D. Hunter, director of the ACLU AIDS Project. "It is the first federal law enacted since the AIDS crisis began which bans AIDS-related discrimination."

Under the new law, it will now be illegal for landlords to disriminate against persons with AIDS-related conditions in the sale or rental of housing. It will also be illegal for landlords to ask questions of prospective tenants about whether they have AIDS or a related condition. If a person were evicted or turned down for an apartment because he or she had an AIDS-related condition, that person could file suit in federal court.

In anticipation of the effectiveness date, the ACLU AIDS Project issued a special 50-page guide to the new law to facilitate its use by lawyers and AIDS pa-tients fighting such discrimina"We hope that the law will be vigorously enforced by the government and used extensively by private lawyers," said Chai Feldblum, ACLU AIDS Project lawyer who wrote the report and was extensively involved in Congressional work on the bill. "While it would be wonderful if on new cases of housing discrimination against people with AIDS or HIV infection were to occur after this Sunday, we will certainly be ready to fight them with this law if they do occur."

The House of Representatives defeated efforts to amend the disabilities provision to exclude people with AIDS before passing the bill last June. It was then passed by the Senate without amendments. The bill provided for an effectiveness date of 180 days after it was signed by the president.

"The coalition effort of the "The coalition exort of the disability rights and civil rights groups that helped move this law through Congress and that kept it intact for people with AIDS was critical," added Feldblum.

"We hope that this report will now serve as a useful guide to let lawyers know what new protec-tions exist for people with AIDS and HIV infection," she said.

Prior to the enactment of this Prior to the enactment of this new law, only 20 states had laws which protected persons with disabilities from discrimination in housing, and some of those did not cover AIDS.

SJ 'Shock Radio' DJ Suspended, Then Fired

by Allen White & Henry Mach

San Jose's controversial radio disc jockey, Perry Stone, was scheduled to return to his KSJO morning show with his on-air assistant, Trish Bell, on March 29. Stone and Bell were suspended without pay for ten days last week because they verbally harangued two 9-year-old Brownies who were on the show to talk about selling Girl Scout cookies. But the San Jose Mercury-News reported on March 22 that Stone has been fired by KSJO.

Stone has been the subject of months of protests by over 20 community organizations for his on air comments, which many called racist, homophobic, anti-Semitic and obscene.

On Jan. 12, the organizations jointly filed a complaint with the FCC against radio station KSJO and Stone, claiming Stone violated community standards regarding indecency and obscenity. The complaint also said, "We also allege that statements made on the show in reference to people of color, women, gay men and lesbians constitute "fighting words," and foster hatred, discrimination and violence."

The complaint is signed by a wide range of organizations including the Human Relations Commission of Santa Clara County, the San Francisco Department of Public Health, the Urban League, the Asian-Americans for Community Involvement in San Jose, the Santa Clara Council of Churches, the Bay Area Network of Gay and Lesbian Educators, the San Jose Rainbow Coalition, the Gay and Lesbian Alliance Against Defamation in San Francisco, the Catholic Diocese of San Jose and others. Gay activist Zane Blaney has been involved with this issue from its beginning.

The pressure had been building against Stone, even before his on-air attack on the 9-year-old Girl Scouts. Advertisers had already disassociated themselves from Stone's conduct by canceling their spots on his controversial program. A long list of advertisers including Hyundai, the Greyhound Bus Company, the Comfort Zone Stores, Sears, Rainbow Records, the Discover Card Services and the Kragen Autoworks had already left Stone's show in spite of the fact that he was rated number one in his time slot and market.

In spite of this pressure from advertisers, community organizations and dozens of individuals, the station had refused to buckle under. Until last week, station manager David Baronfeld had strongly defended Stone and Bell.

To one writer Baronfeld reportedly said, "1t's a dark day when 25 people feel they can dictate to a quarter of a million people." He charged that community groups had set themselves up as "community censors." Baronfeld said that many of the comments Stone makes are open to interpretation. What the group called racial slurs, he said, were ethnic jokes. The station manager also claimed that there are many gay people who were fans of Perry Stone and his brand of humor.

That all changed with the appearance of the Girl Scouts. While on the air Stone cursed at one of the girls because she wouldn't say the name of a sponsor. During the time they were on the show, the girls were the subject of constant ridicule.

During his time at KSJO, Perry Stone has continually used anti-gay material and the AIDS crisis as the butt of his jokes and comments.

On one show Stone said, "My grandfather was a little switch hitter. He had a sex change. He's dead now. So hopefully in the big sky up there, Liberace is doing him. It was his lifelong dream. He always suspected but he died before he could find out that Liberace was a homo. But he always suspected it."

Of ACTUP and the protesters against the Midnight Caller television show, Stone said on Oct. 26, "This makes me want to puke." He then said, "If I was the producer, I would stick my middle finger up and say sit on this. I'm tired of having to bow down to these idiots. I'm not saying the homosexual is an idiot, but just these groups, these general generic groups, that go around and have nothing better to do than to just disrupt people having a good time and people trying to do their job. I'm getting tired of it. Real sick of it."

Baronfeld protested that these remarks were only one element in Stone's repertoire, and that there was more to the show than poking fun at gay people.

On Oct. 20, Stone ridiculed Jewish people with a parody of the movie Jaws. He called it Jews II. The same day he talked of opening "Martin Luther King's coffin." Later the same day he did another Jewish parody, Jews 3D, and commented, "What do I look like to you, a loan shark?"

On Sept. 26 he talked about a new cereal, "Tricks." In a black person's voice, he said, "Tricks are for hookers like your mammy."

On Nov. 10, Stone said, "We need you to bless the show in Jewish." Continuing, he said, "Do it now before I stick your head in the oven." On Nov. 11, he commented about "Little Hitler's Pizza" saying "come to the concentration camp playground."

An article in Milwaukee Magazine, which chronicled Stone's tenure at his previous job on a Wisconsin hard-rock station, reported an identical scenario of racial and anti-gay remarks, followed by protests from community groups, and ultimately Stone being fired from that job while on suspension. It was also reported that during an early controversy over Stone's jokes about dog feces, someone suggested "Why not pick on a group nobody cares about. Like gays."

The question now is whether Stone's departure means the end of homophobic and racist humor on station KSJO or whether the station—whose license comes up for renewal next year—will continue similar programming with a different cast of characters. W

State Issues Bonds For AIDS Hospices

Four Facilities Planned in L.A. Area

by Jay Newquist

California has become the first state in the United States to attack the AIDS epidemic by financing AIDS hospices through the sale of tax-exempt bonds. The initial sale of "War on AIDS" bonds represents a $5 million guarantee from the state to help finance four hospice facilities in Southern California planned by the AIDS Hospice Foundation in Los

"The fact that the patient is not in a hospital means the costs are significantly lower," he add-ed. "Private insurance and Medi-Cal will not have to bear the burden of hospital costs."

Campbell said there was no standardized funding mechanism in place to cover the costs for those patients who did not have private insurance. He added he and others would introduce a bill to establish a reimbursement rate for hospice care at $200 per day.

This amounts to more than

The first phase of the program began in January with the is-suance of $700,000 in bonds to reimburse construction of three 25-bed hospice-care facilities and 25-bed hospice-care unit at Barlow Hospital, known as the Chris Brownlie Hospice.

The bond sale was issued via the California Health Facilities Financing Authority (CHFFA) to assist in the care of people with AIDS in the final phases of the Barbara Smith Tassey, execu-tive director of CHFFA, said the L.A.-based AIDS Hospice Foun-dation had achieved health finandation had achieved health innan-cing authority to finance an AIDS-related project because they had done their homework, submitting a feasibility study as well as obtaining insurance for such a bond venture.

She added that any non-profit agency that "has an organization and looks financially responsible" should similarly apply.

The California Legislature created the licensing regulations for hospices that allowed the sate's involvement in the bond sale. The new licensing category outlined in AB 4536 was authored by Assemblyman Richard Polanco and signed into law last year by Gov. George Deukmejian.

Chris Flammer, a legislative assistant to Polenco, said he expected more applications to tap into AIDS hospice bonds, especially from San Francisco.

"I'm sure this is the first of a series of applications from all over the state. People should apply now if they want to see more hospice facilities of this nature."

The AIDS Hospice Foundation was the first successful appli-cant to the CHFFA for a bond to finance the AIDS hospice pro-ject. The group is scheduled to pay back the bond in nine years.

The president of the AIDS Hospice Foundation said the $5 million bond issue meant as many as 1,200 people per year will have a decent place to spend their final days.

"Hospice care at Brownlie Hospice is providing care for $200 a day as opposed to $1,000 per day in a hospital," said Michael Weinstein.

State Sen. Diane Watson, a sponsor of the War on AIDS bonds, said the hospice facilities were "desperately" needed.

"As the number of persons with AIDS continues to grow, we need to identify and develop places where terminally ill people can go for humane, compassions to according to the latest of the contract of the con sionate and cost-effective health care and support services.

Sen. William Campbell reiterated Watson's remarks when he said that the War on AIDS bonds would result that ter-minally ill patients could spend their finald days in a humane, home-like setting.

Budget Proposal Could Slash $2M From Health Plan

One Clinic Will Close If Cut Is OKd

by Dennis McMillan

The budget proposal for community mental health has been posted, calling for drastic $2 million cuts in health services. Mission Team Two, one of the programs in mental health which serves a mostly gay and lesbian clientele, is slated to close down as a result of the budget cuts.

Dr. Pat Denning, unit coordinator of Mission Team Two outpatient clinic, warned that a number of other programs will be completely closed, and several others will be decimated.

Three years ago, community mental health administration tried to close down the mental health facility at Health Center One in the Castro. There was so much public outery and community support at the time that the administration reneged.

Denning pointed out that head of public health Dr. David Werdegar, gave his assurance there would not be reductions in services to AIDS patients, one of the groups affected by mental health service. She said that about 250 PWAs are served annually at Mission Team Two. Over 75 percent of those patients are gay men and lesbians.

"Mayor Agnos has ordered Reiko True, director of mental health for the city, to submit a 5 percent and 10 percent budget to the health commission for their approval," explained Denning.

'It's about $2 million, just out of mental health, which is unacceptable considering all the peo-ple with AIDS dementia and those in critical need of mental health care," she said.

The proposed cuts would close the office on Monterey, leaving Health Center One, which only has two counseling rooms avail-able for use. Denning said that Health Center One is already extremely overbooked with pa-

"Basically all that will be left of gay services will be Operation Concern," she cautioned. "And they're already overloaded."

Denning requested that con-cerned people call the health commission at 554-2666 to let commissioners know that they oppose these cuts in gay services.

The final vote will be taken Mar. 21, whether or not to accept the budget as submitted or make

■ HIV Positive, ARC, or AIDS? ■
If the past few years of the epidemic have taught us anything, it is that - left untreated - patients experience a steady decline of immune health which leads to the development of opportunistic Infections. Through careful monitoring, early intervention, and flexible use of available medications, our medical group has been able to keep hospitalization and infection rates exceptionally low among the several hundred HIV-positive patients we follow, 45% of whom have AIDS or ARC.

Our group was organized over a year ago with two goals in mind: to foster an honest doctor-patient relationship by acknowledging alternative treatment regimens, and to pioneer early intervention strategles. We strive to provide every patlent with state of the art treatment and personalized attention. Our HIV immune health monitoring system and database -- used with every patient -- Is among the most advanced in the country. Although not primarily a research organization, we pride ourselves on serving as a link between our patients and the latest research findings. As a consequence, patients are routinely referred to us from across the nation.

As former physicians of Positive Action Healthcare, Inc., we have reorganized solely as a medical group, rather than a clinic, in order to provide more personalized care while reducing administrative costs. Our staff of physicians remains the same.

A Full Service Medical Group =

Perhaps you're not HIV positive at all. Perhaps you're new to San Francisco or haven't yet found a personal physician. Perhaps you need a physician located conveniently near your place of work. Whatever your need, we can help.

Our medical group handles routine medical care for non-HIV patients as well as specialized care for people with allergles and environmental illnesses.

We're located at 450 Sutter Street, at Stockton, just 1 block from Union Square and a short walking distance from the financial district. Office hours are 8:30 AM to 6:00 PM Monday through Friday. After hours, a staff physician is always on call for emergencies. Our physicians are on staff at Mount Zion, Pacific Presbyterian, St. Mary's, and UCSF Hospitals.

• An Erythropoetin Study •

As part of our work, we participate in researching important new drugs. One current study, using the drug r-HeEPO, has a few openings left for people with AIDS who are anemic. A genetically engineered protein, r-HuEPO is believed to act like the naturally occurring hormone ERYTHROPO-ETIN, which stimulates bone marrow to produce red blood cells. This new medicine may help eliminate or reduce any need for transfusions associated with AZT use. If you have AIDS and are not currently on AZT, you may be eligible for r-HuEPO. Study participants receive free monitoring by a physician, free lab studies, and free r-HuEPO for 1 year. Doing A Little Thinking

THE DIVERGENCE
(A "What A Difference A Bridge Makes" Nose)

A couple of weeks ago my spouse and I went to the 1989 Kick-Off Dinner for the San Francisco AIDS Emergency Fund. It was held at the very prestigious Peacock Court at the Mark Hopkins Hotel.

There were several reasons for our attending, but the main one, our attending, but the main one, I guess, was that our friend—and publisher of this paper—was stepping down as one of 1988's Honorary Co-Chairs (last year's three co-chairs were Louise Molinari, Bob Ross, and Danny

Many things about the evening got us to thinking. It's dangerous enough when one of us begins to think, but when both of us are at it, watch out. The differences be-tween San Francisco and the East Bay are a lot more than just geography. It was all too apparent that we over here are, indeed, for the most part provincial and our sometimes cavalier attitude is painfully obvious.

Before all of you start penning letters to the editor, let me clarify that statement. There was at least 300 paid attendance at $50 per person. The audience at this banperson. The audience at this ban-quet dinner was composed of gay and straight; drag and tuxedos; common and Royalty; private and public benefactors; lay-men/women and political big-wigs; the hoi polloi and the wellknown. Has any such "gay gathering" on this side of the bay produced a similar mixture of individuals?

The SF AIDS Emergency Fund can be compared to our own East Bay Assistance Fund. The SF/AEF has a board of directors totalling 17, with the four of tors totalling 11, with the four officers rotating yearly. There is a waiting list to sit on that particular board. Also, it's considered an honor to be selected Honorary Co-Chair. EBAF can hardly maintain a full crew of four members of the board, and two have been on the board since its incention. Even trying to get its inception. Even trying to get honorary co-chairs is un-thinkable since no one is truly interested in being a real chair!

SF/AEF can assist AIDS/ARC requests up to $1,000 per year. EBAF has to limit requests to SF/AEF is supported by the Court System, and they not only attend board meetings, but also fund raisers and honorariums such as this kick-off dinner. In the last years, not one reigning Emperor or Empress has attended an EBAF board meeting.

SF/AEF has a system of checks and balances that earmarks it as a forerunner of outstanding or-ganizations. EBAF has never, I repeat, never, been questioned by anyone about its operation. It's either a case of "no one gives a damn once the money is raised," or "complete and utter trust so why get involved?" Both scenarios are not only unaccep table but also extremely sad. As a contributor to any function in-volved with EBAF, into which of those two categories do you fall? And, most importantly, why?

SF/AEF works with all other organizations, as they do with it.
EBAF is an entity that nobody wants to touch, much less work on or with.

And, because there was absolutely no portion of the program for any "outsiders' self-engrandisements," I suppose that's why out of the 330 in attendance, only two were from the East Bay.

Even though my spouse and I were seated at table #33, wayyyy in the back of the Peacock Court (there were 34 tables in all), we were in some respected company.
Within touching and whispering distance were the printers of Egads! More unrest and name calling. The most recent executive director of the AIDS Project East Bay, holding that position only since January of this year, has resigned. Larry Saxxon said he was frustrated by a lack of support from the Alameda County Office of AIDS and its director,

Charges and counter-charges resulted in board president Daramola Cabral-Evins agreeing that "the county's support of the AIDS Project was probably not as good as it should be, but the rela-tions could be smoothed."

Gadzooks! The Sunday edition Gadzooks! The Sunday edition of our local paper had on its front pages these headlines: "Gays Versus Fundamentalists: A Confrontation;" and "The two men are like any other happily married couple in Contra Costa County." One can only wonder whether the "noble" mayor of Oakland feels that the problem ends at the other side of the Caldacott Tunnel—that is, if he even hothered to read the Sunday n bothered to read the Sunday edition.

Shouldn't that be an impor-tant function of the Court system? Bridging the gap be-tween our political leaders and the rank and file, tax-paying gay person? Just a thought.

Next Sunday is Easter, so check your local watering hole for whatever festivities it has planned for that day.

I was really flattered when I overheard someone say that I've never lost my baby face. However, they had to add that I had the face of a baby aardvark! I guess I can smile at that. Love, Nez. V

Judge Delays HIV Test For Man In Scuffle With Cop

Officer Seeks Test Under State Law, Not Prop. 96

by Gregory Douthwaite

A San Jose Superior Court judge has delayed the ruling by a Palo Alto Municipal Court that would have required that a man arrested for drunk driving be tested for HIV. The case represents the first use of a new state law enacted before voters approved Prop. 96 last November. Judge Jeremy Fogel allowed blood to be taken from the man but would not authorize testing it until after another hearing March 24.

The defendant, Glen Alan Rice, 21, was arrested on Sunday, Jan. 29, after a car chase which began in Mountain View and ended when he crashed into a police barricade in Sunnyvale. He cut himself in the accident.

When police ordered Rice out of his car, he allegedly refused. Police then smashed open the driver's window with their flashlights and dragged him out of his car.

Sunnyvale police officer John Credi, who helped drag Rice from his car, claims he cut himself on the broken glass. He requested an AIDS test on Rice, saying he feared their blood had comingled.

After two days of hearings, the test was approved by Palo Alto Judge Stephen V. Manley under the provisions of the Hart bill, which became effective on Jan. 1. The Hart bill was passed by the Legislature last summer in an effort to stop Prop. 96, a much broader mandatory testing statute.

The American Civil Liberties Union is fighting the use of the Hart bill, as well as Prop. 96.

"As long as we have the Fourth Amendment (which prohibits unreasonable search and seizure), we don't strap people down and take their blood when the test results don't tell people anything they need to know," said ACLU attorney Matt Coles.

The Hart bill is "much better" than Prop. 96, but it still has problems, Coles said. The two principal differences are:

(1) Under Hart, the judge must find reason to believe that the defendant committed a crime. Under Prop. 96, being accused of a crime is sufficient.

(2) Under Hart, bodily fluids capable of transferring the HIV virus must be exchanged. Under Prop 96, testing is allowed when there is any transfer of body fluids—even of fluids such as saliva and sweat, which do not transmit AIDS.

The two main objections the ACLU has to the Hart bill are: (1) there are all sorts of ways that semen and blood can be transferred without transferring the virus, and (2) there really isn't anything that can be done with the test results.

In the hearings which ended on Monday, Deputy District Attorney Cynthia Seveley argued that testing was necessary so that the officer can get treatment if Rice tests positive.

The chance of getting AIDS from a blood splash onto an open wound is "quite small, smaller than from a needle stick injury, which is already small," Coles said. Blood would be pumping out of both wounds, and the chance of anything entering the bloodstream would be extremely small, he said.

The lawsuit alleges that Rice is a homosexual and a drug user. Coles described Rice as "a nice young kid with a lot of problems." He said the allegations were "irrelevant hearsay" and that they were one of the two most offensive things about the lawsuit.

Rice's blood has already been drawn: it was taken when he was arrested. Laboratory tests showed that he had a blood alcohol level of 0.23 percent, well above the legal limit of 0.10 percent. The judge said the same blood sample will be used for the AIDS test.

The judge also ruled that there was enough evidence to try Rice on charges of felony drunken driving, assault with a deadly weapon, resisting arrest, reckless driving, driving with a suspended license and leaving the scene of an accident.

Rice has already been convicted of drunken driving three times. When arrested, he was wanted on a $50,000 warrant for failing to appear in San Francisco on a drunken driving charge. He is being held in Santa Clara County jail.

San Mateo County has named Susan McCreedy as its new AIDS coordinator. McCreedy, who has worked in health services and education in Michigan for eight years, will direct the county's efforts in AIDS prevention and services and help to formulate its policies in this area.

The new coordinator most recently worked as a health education consultant for the Michigan Department of Public Health's Office of AIDS Prevention. She has a master of public health degree from the University of Michigan.

McCreedy replaces Ed Hilton, who resigned his position in December. She began work on March 20. Until that time, Jonathan Messinger, a community program specialist, has acted as coordinator.

The new coordinator will join the county's AIDS Project at a time of expansion. Three new positions have been added in the past four months, doubling the AIDS Project's staff, and the agency has moved into more spacious offices in the Department of Health Services building on 37th Avenue in San Mateo.

The AIDS Project conducts outreach programs to teach highrisk groups in the county about the disease and what they can do to prevent it. The agency also subsidizes drugs for AIDS patients, provides referrals for other AIDS-related services in the county and operates a videotape library that is open to the public.

McCreedy was chosen from about 30 applicants through a two-month screening process, said Dr. Brad Gilbert, health officer for San Mateo County, who interviewed finalists.

"I really look forward to working with her in continuing to develop our AIDS education program for San Mateo County," Gilbert said.

In her last position, McCreedy acted as liaison between Michigan's state AIDS office and local AIDS agencies in the state. She trained staff for AIDS prevention work at both the state and local levels and wrote grant proposals.

"Her strengths include staff development, AIDS training, grant writing and implementation," Gilbert said. "Although she's new to the area, she has a very good grasp of the area's needs."

Influencing Media

While Gays Fight Slander, Right-Wingers Oppose Any Positive Gay Images

by Henry Mach

yatollah Khomeini's death threat in response to Sal-man Rushdie's book, tanic Verses, has been denound as offensive to anyone who believes in the free exchange of

In the last year, Christian fundamentalists picketed the movie The Last Temptation of Christ, and gay activists disrupted film-ing of a Midnight Caller TV episode they said exploited AIDS hysteria. Were these actions offen-sive? Were they harmful to the First Amendment? Or were they a necessary element in the free exchange of ideas?

The war to influence the media has been raging throughout the 1980s, with gay issues the focus in many of the battles.

At the start of this decade, Jerry Falwell announced plans to mobilize his followers to protest "anti-family" material on net-work television. Their targets would be sponsors of programs that "undermined Christian values"—code words for stories with any positive depictions of

Was Falwell successful?

Right-wing Christians are generally credited with pressuring NBC-TV to de-homosexualize its 1981 sitcom Love, Sidney. Originally written as a gay man share ing his Manhattan apartment with a single mother, Tony Ran-dall's title character was neutered with all references to Sidney's gay-ness and his deceased male lover removed. The resulting show was so bland and colorless it barely made it through a second season.

But, could gays rightfully object to the tactics of this anti-gay lobby?

Four years earlier, outraged at Billy Crystal's portrayal of Jody, the gay son who wore dresses at planned a sex change operation on the controversial sitcom Soap, gay protesters pressured ABC to make script changes. Since the objections centered around the old-fashioned stereotype of an ef-feminate gay man, the solution at that time was to give Jody a macho, pro-football player boyfriend.

The current fight remains: What will mainsteam America see or hear about gay people? How will gays be portrayed in the mass media? And, more fundamental-ly, will gays be portrayed at all?

HEARTBEAT STOPS

Rev. Donald Wildmon of Mississippi has taken on the mantle of right-wing media watchdog. This year, his "Christian Leaders for Responsible TV" (CLea P.TV) conducted a vendetta again i see short-lived ABC series HeartBeat.

Set in a women's medical center, HeartBeat's ensemble cast included actress Gail Strickland portraying the first continuing lesbian character in a television series. For this, Wildmon accused ABC of trying "to promote homo-sexuality as an acceptable, approv-ed lifestyle."

In a four-page diatribe to his sllowers, Wildmon quoted TV Guide (owned by conservative Reagan buddy, Walter Annen-berg) in asserting that gays are "the most powerful group lobby-ing television"; he expressed in-credulity that ABC would intro-duce a lesbian character "at a time when AIDS is killing thoutime when AIDs is killing thou-sands of homosexuals"; and he of-fered two pre-printed postcards— one complaining to ABC, and the other to Lever Brothers, threaten-ing to boycott that company's pro-ducts if its advertising dollars con-tinued to "promote homosexual-ity"

Earlier this month, the network cancelled HeartBeat, but super-vising producer Joe Viola does not believe Wildmon's campaign had any bearing on that decision.

"it was purely a victim of ratings," Viola says. Scheduled opposite NBC's powerhouse L.A. Law, and twice pre-empted by the news department, Viola asserts that "HeartBeat never got the chance it needed." While citing difference was presented by the work of the chance it needed." While citing difference was presented to the chance it needed." differences between the network and the production team as to the tone and content of episodes, the presence of the lesbian character was not an issue.

"The first two months," Viola tive. They were all from funda-mentalists back East." But, Viola credits Wildmon's campaign with creating a backlash. "Ultimately, it wake up a constituency of gay. it woke up a constituency of gay and lesbian groups, as well as women's groups, medical groups, women's groups, medical groups, self-help groups, and various po-litical clubs." In recent months, letters were evenly split on the subject of the lesbian character.

"There is a real value in contro-versy," Viola believes. "When in-terest groups act within their right to respond, that is at least a way of getting issues examined. We've been educated by both sides in this fight."

Meanwhile the press has re-ported success for another Wildported success for another Wild-mon campaign—this time target-ing Saturday Night Live. Com-plaints from Christian fundamen-talists about use of the words "penis" and "funk" prompted Ralston Purina and General Mills to remove commercials from that for prompting Sears, Greyhound, Maybelline, Hyundai, the California State Lottery and others to cancel their spots on Stone's show.

David Baronfeld, KSJO's station manager, says Stone was hired "because he was an outrageous, sarcastic morning personality, irreverent and unique, unlike the other 80 radio per-sonalities on competing stations."

Stone's irreverence includes a fast-paced barrage of racial slurs fast-paced barrage of racial slurs intermixed with put-downs of "homos," "fags" and "stick-boys." Defending an employer who fired an HIV-positive florist, Stone ranted: "You get some flowers and put them in a vase and stick your nose right in it to smell it. Right? Now what happens if the AIDS virus is on there? You just snorted AIDS."

Explaining his passion in fight-Explaining in spassion in igning Stone's presence on Bay Area radios, Blaney says, "I personally believe in cause and effect. Perry Stone is exacerbating intergroup tensions. Given the alarmgroup tensions. Given the alarming increase in anti-gay violence, Stone is helping to make it okay for someone from Concord to come here to San Francisco and make it more dangerous for me on the street."

KSJO's Baronfeld protests: 'It's unfair to blame Perry for the increase in gay-bashing. He's an entertainer, not a political com-mentator." He continues, "I have a problem with censorship in any form. I'm not opposed to individuals making decisions for themselves to change the channel, but I don't like any group trying to censor media."

In mid-January, the coalition filed a formal complaint with the FCC, charging Stone and KSJO with indecency and obscenity. Blaney would have preferred making the case over "fighting words" (Stone's idea of joking around includes: "He swishes. It's like you just want to take a double-gauge shotgun to him," or "He deserves to die... He was a homo."), but that's a charge much more difficult to prove.

The fact of the matter is the The fact of the matter is the Republican-appointed members of the FCC are more likely to rule against Stone's leering comments about sex and bodily functions.

Blaney admits concern. "It's unfortunate that in opposing Perry Stone in this way, we may Perry Stone in this way, we may strengthen the grip of the conservatives on the FCC. It's a dilemma: But referring to FCC action last year against a radio station that broadcast segments from Robert Chesley's play Jerker, Blaney concludes, "Lesbian and gay programs get censored. Perry Stone gets away with it. We're asking the FCC to apply the same standards." standards."

On March 15, KSJO suspended Perry Stone for ten days for hav-ing insulted two 9-year-old Brownies who had come on his show to promote sales of Girl Scout cookies. In announcing the suspension, Baronfeld denied that it was a publicity stunt. He ex-plained that children were an unacceptable subject for humor and that the suspension had "nothing to do with the controversy [Stone] has generated through his remarks on women, homosex-uals and minorities."

Stone's previous job, as morn-ing "shock-jock" on a Milwaukee hard-rock station, followed a simihard-rock station, followed a similar pattern—including protests by gays, advertiser bailouts, and suspensions. According to an article in Milwaukee Magazine, some say Stone was fired from that job because he publicly insulted the management, while others contend he was removed. others contend he was removed because too many advertisers had left the increasingly controversial

Three Film Greats Miss Badly

by Ron Larsen

here are supposedly eight million stories in the Naked City, and celebrated film directors Martin Scorese, Francis Coppola and Woody Allen serve up three of the lamest in a singularly uninspired anthology entitled New York Stories. In the process of creating what amounts to a trilogy of vanity productions, the self-indulgent ty productions, the self-indulgent directors give the Big Apple a bum rap, leaving it just a little more bruised than it was before.

Scorsese's story, Life Lessons, is the first and longest segment of the Manhattan trilogy—and it might have been the best. Written by Richard Price (The Color of Money), it's about the crumbling relationship between a successful Now York action (Nich). Nolte) and his disgruntled girl-friend/protege (Rosanna Ar-quette), a would-be artist who resents being "used" by the master as a source of inspiration.

Note does a fine job of por-traying a selfish, egomaniacal painter who lives for his art, and Scorsese captures the creative process of the artist at work as few other directors have before. But he allows his two-character play to drag on for a full hour before reaching its cliche-ridden conclusion, which is telescoped in the opening scene.

The real worm in this slice of the Big Apple, though, is the annoying performance of Arquette. A graduate of the Whine and Pout School of Dramatic Arts, she creates a character so unlikable that it's hard to sympathica with her was though she's supposed to be the under-dog of the piece. Scorsese should have directed her to lighten up a bit instead of allowing her to Coppola further debilitates the New York series by supplying it with a weak middle link. Entitl-ed Life Without Zoe, this wouldbe fantasy is really just a pointless takeoff on the Eloise stories, about a poor little rich girl ensconced in a luxurious Manhattan hotel, left to fend for herself while her estranged parents are off traipsing around the world.

One part pampered princess, one part waif, one part loving daughter, and one part incorrigible brat, the title character is totally unbelievable, as are her mindless exploits. At one point, when asked if she's ever tasted chocolate pudding the Chanel. chocolate pudding, the Chanel-clad sophisticate replies, "No, but I hear it's a lot like chocolate

The funniest, most original thing about Allen's new minicomedy is its title: Oedipus Wrecks. It's a one-joke story that relies on a ludicrous sight gag for most of its laughs, and I won't spoil what fun there is by describing it Sufficient to exerct the in this ing it. Suffice it to say that in this extended skit, Allen once again reprises his familiar screen persona from Annie Hall et al. As Sheldon Mills, he plays a neurotic, angst-ridden New Yorker beset with a psychiatrist who doesn't understand him, a who doesn't understand him, a Centile fiancee (Mia Farrow) with three kids from a previous marriage, and a shrewish Jewish mother (Mac Questel, the original voice of Betty Boop) who's the bane of his existence.

Guess what happens after Allen wishes that his tormentor would just disappear... but then dreams-come-true do have a funny way of turning into living nightmares, and they can come back to haunt you in the most unexpected ways. So goes this yarn, which is further marred by a "happily ever after" ending that's as corny as it is contrived. But not to worry: Allen's fans will applaud this segment as the most purely entertaining of the trilogy.

New York Stories boasts some solid laughs from Allen, a memorable portrait of an artist from Scorsese and Nolte, and some elegant window dressings from the entire Coppola clan. But, on balance, it's a disappoint-ing blend of mini-comedy, quasi-fantasy, and near-drama, all mashed up into applesauce.

Shame on three of America's most talented directors for not doing better by the city they profess to love!

Restored 'Lawrence' A Film Treasure

(I. to r.) Anthony Quinn, Peter O'Toole (T.E. Lawrence), and Omar Sharif wage war against the Turks.

by Robert Frank

orthern California had great cause for rejoicing last weekend. Rain, cascades of it, returned to tinder dry California, and a classic, and classy, film of greatness and grandeur returned to San Francisco to quench the thirst of parched patrons of cinema art: Lawrence of Arabia, in all its full (216 minutes), newly restored glory.

Film buffs can have their fill at this spectacular and lush oasis in a seeming desert of mediocrity, pandering, sometimes silliness and too often trash that passes for film-making in the 1980s. While the metaphorical thirst may be taken care of, viewing this film may give rise to a real, literal thirst until the intermission, so palpable is the heat, aridness and wind in the desert seemes due to the realism and brilliance of the camera work of Freddie Young, Oscar-winning cinematographer, and such second unit photographers as

Nicholas Roeg, who has since become a notable film director.

To be sure, the 1980s has had some fine films of epic proportions such as Reds, Gandhi, Out of Africa, and Passage to India (this last by Lawrence director David Lean), but none to match the sweep and power of Lawrence. This film has intelligence and great acting, especially by Peter O'Toole in his first lead performance. This performance was particularly stunning in 1962, before the world became familiar with O'Toole's voice and mannerisms, and it still is splendid in conveying convincingly the many facets of the character of this enigmatic man.

The mystery of T.E. Lawrence, who some historians consider to be one of the great men of this century, is explored but not solved in this film, which was the intention of Lean and screenwriter Robert Bolt (author of A Man for All Seasons) in his first screenplay. To this day Lawrence is something of a mystery man. Even his death is shrouded in some mystery, i.e., was it accidental or suicidal?

One mystery, or at least a note of ambivalence, about Lawrence is the question of whether or not he was homosexual. While the film does not bring that subject up explicitly, his capture and torture by the Turks under the command of the Turkish Bey (played by Jose Ferrer) could imply that he was raped. The thoughts of the Bey as telegraphed by Ferrer's face and motions suggest a certain kind of interest in the blond, light-skinned Lawrence on the part of the Bey.

The film makes it clear that the incident changed Lawrence. He gained a realization of who and what he was and who and what he wasn't. He had begun to think he was invincible and, as far as the enemy was concerned, even "invisible." The violation of his person proved he was vulnerable, imperfect and probably some other human traits he hated to face. He wanted to return to being "ordinary," but was convinced to continue being "extraordinary" in spite of his misgivings. Touches of madness, obsessiveness, megalomania and cruelty became part of the character of the post-violated Lawrence.

The relationship between Lawrence and the two teenage Arab boys who idolize him and become his servants is another instance where the script plays it straight without comment or judgment, but one can read between the lines, if one cares to. The film is ambivalent, implying idol-worship and nothing more.

Great credit and loud cheers must go to Robert A. Harris, archivist-producer once involved in the restoration and presentation of Abel Gance's Napoleon, for the monumental restoration of this film in a vivid, pristine 70 mm print, further enhanced by Dolby Stereo sound. Also involved in the restoration were Jim Painten, a friend and partner of Harris on other projects; Anne V. Coates, the original Oscar-winning editor of the film, "the one person who knew not only how the picture was put together, but also how it had been taken apart"; and the Oscar-winning director, Lean.

Film directors Martin Scorsese and Steven Spielberg also provided assistance where they could. Some of the actors who originally gave such fine performances in this film (O'Toole, Alec Guinness, Anthony Quinn and Arthur Kennedy) re-recorded some lines of lost dialogue, which had to be mechanically altered to compensate for the actors' voices having matured over the past 25 years.

Details of stumbling blocks and frustrations along the way are too numerous to mention. Film afficianados worldwide should be forever grateful to those who labored with love of film art to bring back triumphantly the real Lawrence of Arabia. Bless 'em all!

'We The Living'

An Unintentional Cry Against All Forms of Totalitarianism

by Will Snyder

t would be too easy to refer to We The Living as anti-Communist. The long-lost Italian film paints a bleak picture of how the 1920s Soviet Union destroyed the individualistic souls of Russians. But We The Living, made right underneath Mussolini's nose in 1942, has an ironic place in cinema history which couldn't have pleased either II Duce or the film's author, the ultra-conversative Ayn Rand.

Six months after the release of the film, box office receipts were excellent. But word got back to the government that the Italian population saw similarities between Russian and Italian totalitarianism. The film was withdrawn and wasn't seen again until Rand's lawyers uncovered a print 27 years later.

We The Living was an unbelievably good throwback to the kind of old fashioned love story/historical epic that Hollywood made so often and so well in the 1930s. Director Goffredo Alesandrini worked briefly at Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer during that era and the old Metro/Selznick style shows through quite well. It has star power with the beautiful Alida Valli (who later made The Paradine Case and The Third Man), a very young and handsome Rossano Brazzi and an extremely capable Fosco Giachetti (Italy's top box office star during the war).

We The Living tells the story of Kira Argounova (Valli), a young Petrograd college student who carries on romances with two men. Her first love is Leo Kovalensky (Brazzi), the son of an executed count who is constantly being hunted by the secret police. Kira's other love is Andrei Taganov (Giachetti), a top Communist Party official and secret policeman.

Kira uses Andrei to get the material things only a top Party member can provide. She also gets money from Andrei to provide for Leo who has tuberculosis and must go away to the warmer Crimea. Andrei thinks the money is going to Kira's needy relatives.

When Leo returns to Petrograd later, he joins the black market. Even though Kira is his lover, his attitude toward her is belligerent and selfish. Eventually, he is arrested by Andrei, who discovers Kira's deception.

Because Andrei loves Kira so much, he helps Leo escape. After this, Andrei commits suicide. It is then that Kira sees her own selfishness. This theme is somewhat surprising when one considers Rand's reputation for "rational selfishness" in her own life.

Anyone who loves historical epics and the weepy melodramatic nature of films such as Camille, A Tale of Two Cities and Gone With The Wind will appreciate We The Living, It has good acting, impressive direction by Alesandrini and sparkling black and white photography by Guiseppe Caracciolo. It is a film not to be missed.

'A Signature Show'

Gay Men's Chorus Brilliant Again

reflected in the multi-colored accessories of the singers. Performers were decked out in orange and red scarves, St. Patrick's Day hats, and sweaters of all colors to match the rainbow behind them.

The performance was interrupted for the announcement that this Signature Show marked the first concert of the second decade for the chorus. On Saturday, July 1 they will perform with the Windy City Chorus from Chicago, and on Sunday, July 2 their group will travel to Seattle to sing with over 2,500 other gay and lesbian singers from throughout the United States and Canada. Auditions will be held for anyone who is not in the chorus who might want to join them in Seattle.

In a beautifully expressed statement, the audience was reminded that the success of the chorus throughout the last 10 years could not have been achieved without their love and support.

A Gershwin medley followed, featuring various chorus members in some of the best songs from the past: "The Man I Love," "Someone To Watch Over Me," "Embraceable You," "They Can't Take That Away From Me' and "What a Wonderful World."

Anna Schenk-Hughes gave a strong rendition of "Climb Every Mountain," the beautiful and moving song from The Sound of Music. She was followed on stage by chorus members playing two sets of lovers from Sonheim's The Follies. Robert Weinand, Stephen Emlaw, Kenneth Koppes and Tim Garner received a spirited ovation from the audience for their amusing interpretation of the lyrics.

One of the last numbers to be performed was the forceful To-night Finale from Leonard Bernstein's West Side Story. The anger and willfulness of the two rival gangs was brilliantly expressed by the chorus under a vigorous and sure direction.

Before the final encore, the chorus honored some of their members who would never again grace the stage.

Somehow the evening was summed up by a woman who turned to her companion just before the show began and said, "This group has become the greatest single goodwill ambassador for San Francisco in this city."

by Mary Richards

he San Francisco Gay Men's Chorus showed its brilliance in what it called "A Signature Show" on March 18 and 19 at Herbst Theater. Beginning with excerpts from operas of Verdi, Mozart and Puccini and rounding out their programme with the Tonight Finale from West Side Story, the men on stage were superb.

The performance was heightened by the guest appearances of two sopranos: Karen Tesitor and Anna Schenk-Hughes. Under the direction of Gregg Tallman, the chorus, their featured singers and guest accompanist Richard Rogers blended together to bring the audience an evening of delightful and moving music.

Just before the show began, a Carol Channing look-alike came bursting down the aisle, feather boa fluttering, to enquire of sign language interpretor Stefan Lazar if he was directing traffic—and just where were her seats?

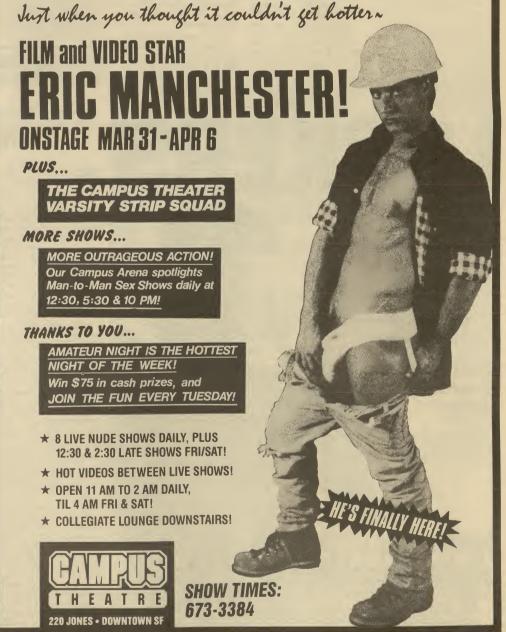

This bit of off-stage theater by one of the chorus made the audience laugh, and was a light prelude to the serious opera vignettes which were to follow. Gary Falardeau as "Carol" would pop up occasionally from her box seat, to remind us that she was there, and ultimately joined the chorus for her Art is Calling to Me number.

Calling to Me number.

Karen Tesitor gave a spirited rendition of "Come Boys, Let's All Be Gay!" from The Student Prince, followed by a beautiful sextet from Lucia di Lammermoor, which featured both sopranos as well as chorus members James Gilman, Dale Richard, John Musselman and Bruce Chelini.

Nothing could be more appropriate for the chorus to perform than Romberg's "Stout-hearted Men," which they did with spirit and gusto. Although their rendition could have been prolonged, to hear them sing "Give us the men who will fight for the right they adore," seemed perfectly suitable to the occasion.

It was obvious that the more formal part of the evening was over when the chorus returned to the stage after intermission. A huge rainbow background was

Electrifying

Lemper Sings Weill on CD And It's Something

by Dennis McMillan

lthough it wouldn't hurt if you were either a devoted Kurt Weill afficianado or a well-versed student of the German language, even the most uneducated and unsophisticated music listener can appreciate the electrifying "Ute Lemper Sings Kurt Weill" release on the London label.

True, the first eight selections are sung in pure German, and there is even one in French to stump the merely bilingual, but Lemper manages to break the language barrier with her highly emotional delivery and some-times golden, sometimes brassy

It would have been infinitely helpful to have included a translation sheet with the tape recording or compact disc, but barring that oversight, the pure joy of relishing Lemper's range from sophisticated to sweet to downright feisty sound is enough.

Beginning with a soft and lilting "Fennimores Lied," she segues into a rough, gutteral march of "Casars Tod" and then invites the listeners to gently waltz with her to the "Salomon Scare."

The most philistine of heathens cannot fail to recognize and toe-tap along with her rendition of "Mack the Knife." If you were pushed away by the sac-charine Bobby Darin version years ago, give Lemper a listen now. The tinny, gritty backup music of the RIAS Berlin Kammerensemble directed by John Mauceri lends a delightfully seamy ambience conjuring up all sorts of dirty doings in backstreet

"Die Ballade von der sex-uellen Horigkeit" is a sly little ditty where one can almost see her asides and flirtatious wink-ings. And the "Zu Potsdam" takes you one moment from the most somber of moods to the next in a Cerman heer graden of next in a German beer garden of unabandoned oompahpahing and back to serious again.

Her seductive talking through-out "Lied des Lotterieagenten" makes one think that Marlene Dietrich and Lotte Lenya have suddenly taken over her vocal chords. Mein godt, she could be reading from the Berlin yellow pages and it would still sound X-rated!

When we finally reach the English part of the album, it is the familiar Doors' piece, "Alabama Song," in which Lemper jadedly insists, "Show us the way to the next pretty boy, oh don't ask why..." No need for exdon't ask why...' planations, Ute.

Then she slaps her audience in the face with her very French, very gutsy "Je ne t'aime pas."
Her final exploding expletive "I don't love you anymore," is more than convincing.

what is most amazing is that this sour kraut cutie can quickly switch into a near perfect Bronx accent in "I'm a Stranger Here Myself." One is reminded of a young Gwen Verdon. The musical accompaniment is very nightclubby and Broadway entre-act in its approach—lots of fun.

I was a little annoyed and distracted by the wind sound effects throughout "Westwind," but was appeased when the gen-tle brushing of high hats and cymbals took over for a much more subtle effect.

Lemper's finale, "Speak Low," is apropos, espeially with the lyrics: "The curtain descends!

everything ends... too soon." My sentiments exactly toward this exquisite cabaret performance. One sits in his theatre seat anxiously awaiting the encore and finds it has all too soon come to

We can only anticipate her next release promising selections from Cabaret and Cats. Can you just imagine Ute as both the raucous, slick Sally Bowles and sensitive, furry Grizabella? ▼

Symphony Faces Commitment

New recordings for London/Decca will continue to enrich the orchestra's enthusiastically received discography and Blomstedt's selections of contemporary music, in addition to world premieres by Tippett and Elliot Carter, include a number of U.S. premieres and first West Coast

Last week, Blomstedt conducted the first San Francisco Symphony readings of Berkeley composer Olly Wilson's Lumina composer Olly Wilson's Lumina and the triumphant return after 23 years of Benjamin Britten's brooding Symphony for Cello and Orchestra. Britten is an acknowledged 20th century master, but Wilson, despite his importance as pedagogue and significance as a composer who is black, needs the exposure. Lumina is a short piece and, (based on one hearing) of relatively minor interest, but more will be heard from him next season and his 15-minute score certainly accomplishes the season and in 5-minute score certainly accomplishes the desired effect. A source chord grows and expands, creating the aural equivalent of glowing light, then softly fades to silence.

Program annotator Michael Steinberg's always informative and beautifully written summations proved a bit frustrating in Wilson's case, whetting our appetite for much more than Lumina was designed to deliver. The composer talks of his earliest models, and musical models and musical influences—ranging from Bapinfluences—ranging from Bap-tist Gospel music to jazz and the Central European classics. We can only hope for a much longer piece in the future that will showcase more of Olly Wilson's rare artistic heritage. Thankful-ly, there will be Herbert Blomstedt to encourage this pro-mining rules. mising voice.

'Rags' To Riches

heatreWorks is the Palo Alto company whose name has come to signify the Bay Area's musical theatre wonder works. They've delighted in offering up for re-evaluation by musical theatre buffs and the simple pleasure of audiences who enjoy a good show, a number of musicals which for various, often incomprehensible reasons weren't successful in the commercial thickets of Broadway.

Where musicals are concerned —especially those unfortunate shows whose quick demise on Broadway render next to impossible an acquaintance and an assessment of their qualities, I've come to think of TheatreWorks as a public service organization—their full-bodied, lavishly mounted and well-played productions of Merrily We Roll Along, Pacific Overtures, and The Rink stood out in this regard; and their current production is another sterling rescue.

When Rags opened on Broadway, the critics, while lauding the score, were unable or unwilling to accept the musical's diffuse multiplicity of characters. Since then, for a successful Chicago production and then for the Theatre-Work's mounting, rewriting has been done. While the show's epic scope still retains some awkward leaps of action in the second act and a largely unresolved final curtain, the immediacy of its story and the bedazzzlement of Charles Strouse's score sweep all before it.

Rags picks up where Fiddler on the Roof left off—the immigrants are pouring into New York. They find, however, that the biggest trip is not immigration, but the shedding of old ways demanded by the new world—in the quest to escape the servitude of factory owners who view them as grist for the mill, and in the realization that they not only can but must create their lives here; where once they ran from trouble, here they find they must sometimes cause it to obtain their rights.

The story of upward mobility fills Rags—the escape from poverty and prejudice, the demand for worker's rights, the selling-out of one's morals to obtain the American dream of wealth and position—these are the stories of Rags, told through the estrangement of the once obedient wife Rebecca from her husband as he falls prey to the alluring promises of Tammany Hall politics.

here are still, even in this revised script, too many subplots. Rags jumpcuts with the dizzying rapidity of an MTV video, frequently at the detriment of our fully empathizing with the central characters. But the main pleasures of the show are not shortchanged. Foremost is a glorious score which uses the most infectious ragtime as the sound of America, played in counterpoint to the bittersweet delight of the European sound of klezmir music (played live onstage by a strolling klezmir hand).

The score includes soaringly operatic explosions of emotion, a clever soft shoe turn for the crooked politicians, a sweet character number of old-fashioned musical comedy delight called "Three Sunny Rooms" for a matchmaking widow, and — wonder of wonders in these days of melodic paucity—a drop dead beautiful ballad called "Blame It on the Summer Night" which alone would make the show a must-hear. These pleasures are seconded by the surge of Robert Kelley's staging and Barbara Valente's choreography, and by the committed, large scale performances.

Livia Genise is hardly short of heroic in the leading role of the wife Rebecca, singing gloriously and growing believably from a subservient wife to a shaper of history. Richard Kelley's pain as a self-loathing Jew who wants to whitewash his identity is moving, and Miriam Babin wins hearts as the designing widow. Catch Helene O'Connor, of Theatre Rhinoceros' What's a Mother To Rebecca (Livia Genise) stands up to her sweatshop boss (John Jay Espino), demanding better working conditions, in $\it Rags$.

Do? in a comically kvetching cameo, and admire the skill and strong voices of dozens of other singers in this Lower East Side Gone With the Wind.

In its profusion of riches, Rags sometimes suffers urban sprawl. Rags sometimes dilutes its effect by trying to encompass too much. But it does point up the contradictions of a country that offers freedom which can only be earned through servitude, promises of riches to those enduring poverty, and parades refinement and fashion to those who remain in rags.

And most hopeful and painful of all, it demonstrates a truth known to gay people and all minorities in this land of freedom: "Here they let you do anything—they may make it difficult for you, but you can do it."

In its tremendous surge of music and beautiful swirl of stage action, TheatreWorks' Rags lets us experience the primal gift of America's freedom, and the endless struggles we face to obtain it.

Symphony

t was certainly a risk, bringing an international star onstage to perform one of the thorniest and most densely argued of Benjamin Britten's compositions. No matter how dark or inscrutable Britten's mood, however, his music always conveys a deeply felt humanity with lyrical flashes of profound hope and inspiration. Cellist Yo-Yo Ma is rightly known for his uncommonly sweet tone, rich and varied and capable of lending warm expression to the most baffling material. His ease in surmounting frightening technical demands is thrilling without resorting to theatrics. His performance was, therefore, predictably superb in unravelling the mysteries of the complicated score.

The Symphony for Orchestra and Cello deserves its unique title, for the soloist always remains fully integrated with the ensemble. Something like the instrumental equal of Shakespeare's Hamlet, the cello heroically responds to the world and uncontrollable forces, sometimes probing, ranting or crying, but trying to maintain a voice both accusatory and sane. Britten allows for bravura, though never stooping to obvious effects. The wonder was in following Ma on his long, often impeded, journey without great difficulty. The hall was hot and muggy, but Yo-Yo Mariveted audience attention, never going slack. The effect was electrifying in a curious way. This was the kind of performance that resonates in the memory for a long time after.

The concert's closing selection Death and Transfiguration by Richard Strauss was imperfectly performed, but it was an apt conclusion to a long and demanding evening. Blomstedt is highly regarded for his Strauss interpretations and the orchestra tried to match his vision without great success. They were more than likely exhausted after Yo-Yo Ma's herculean effort.

An evening of 20th century works that must have pleased even the most biased listeners bodes well for the symphony's commitment to modern music in the 1990s.

exploded in sheer delight when 28-year-old Italian stallion Mark Guglielmo was announced as the winner of the 1989 Mr. South of Market con-test, a benefit for the AIDS Emergency Fund that netted over $2,400 last Saturday, March 18 at the S.F. Eagle.

The preceding hours before the contest saw a torrential rain storm hovering over the city, but thanks to the expertise of video experts Luis Cordero and his sidekick Bruce McCutcheon, their video cameras were hooked up to the S.F. Eagle's video system and all in attendance were afforded a bird's-eye view of the proceedings onstange, moved inside because of the rain.

The first runner up was Jon DeLeon (Mr. January on the 1989 Bare Chest Calendar) and there was a tie for the second runner up between Stephen Lesh of San Jose and Stephen Davis, a mem-ber of the Constantines MC.

Emcees Al Parker and Leather Daddy's Boy Rick Ramirez presented the contestants in three appearances for judges Ed Winant, Mr. Leather San Diego; Stephen Mistler, Mr. Leather S.F.; Jason Ladd, Leather Daddy VI; and Glen Terrio, Mr. Leather S.F. 284 and the current vice president. '84 and the current vice president of the AIDS Emergency Fund. The 10 contestants went through a pre-judging session earlier in the day and appeared onstage in a do-your-own-thing outfit first, in jock attire the second time out and in leather on their final appearance, which in-cluded a one-minute speech concerning their views on leather generally and South of Market in particular.

Mr. South of Market '89, Mark Guglielmo.

The audience was also afforded an opportunity to vote for their favorite contestant and the highest vote getter got 25 points added to the judges' scores, with 15 points for the next highest and 5 points for the third highest. In between the contestants' ap-pearances, the audience was treated to a couple of numbers by the Foggy City Square Dancers and later on, Tom Rodgers and ometimes it's those little details that snag ometimes it's those little details that snag you. Last week I came upon an article in the Chronicle by Mark Z. Baraback. Front page news about "How a Bar Riot Began the U.S. Gay Revolution." How's that for a snappy page A6 headline? Leave it to the Chronicle to reel in the unsuspecting tourist with a line like that. But in spite of the in the unsuspecting tourist with a line like that. But in spite of the banner, the piece turned out to be a very well-researched and well-written synopsis of the advances we've made since the Stonewall Rebellion. He failed to mention the consciousness raising by gay groups that led up to Stonewall, and then with a simple slight of hand he seemingly knocked the movement back a couple of decades.

Where was our numbers recognition? The author himself states that since Stonewall, "The single most important change, according to dozens of gay men and lesbians interviewed across and lesbians interviewed across the country, has been greater visibility—to one another and to the world." Yet the caption under an accompanying photograph states that, "An estimated 50,000 gays and lesbians participated in a march to the White House in October 1987."

C'mon now, Mark! That march was the largest civil rights demonstration in the history of this nation and will be viewed in history as one of the major events in the evolution of the gay rights movement. We get 50,000 people out annually for the Gay Freedom Day Parade in San Francisco alone. Even the National Park Service Police in washington erroneously estimated four times that amount (200,000 participants) on the day of the march, only to revise that number to over 500,000 several months ago after viewing and analyzing aerial photographs of the rally site behind the Capitol. Marchers walking 20 abreast took over five and a half hours to leave the Elipse that day. Now you go figure! 50,000!

Where is our "visibility"? Where is our recognition? Where are our accurate representations in the press?

The Washington Post reporters, hurrying to meet an early deadline the evening of the march wrote that, "Shoulder to shoulder, arm in arm and hand in shoulder, arm in arm and hand in hand, hundreds and thousands of lesbians and gay men and other homosexual rights advocates from across the nation marched..." Hundreds and thousands. In spite of the "official" police estimate of 200,000.

After the march, I rode back to Chicago on Route 80 pulling in at truckstops along the way to gather newspaper accounts from cities and towns in the heartland. cities and towns in the heartland. The Toledo Blade reported, "More than 200,000 gay Americans and their supporters marched..." The Detroit Free Press opened their coverage with, "Thousands [sic] of gay and lesbian activists marched past the White House up to the Capitol on Sunday demanding protection from discrimination and calling for additional federal aid for AIDS research." The Grand Rapids Press estimated the crowd at 50,000, as did news broadsters on the radio giant WLS in Chicago.

The deception spread overseas via the wire services. A paragraph on the 12 Oct. 87 world summary page of the London Times ran with the headline, "Gay AIDS March" and again, reported that "thousands of homosexual activists, led by AIDS victims in wheelchairs marched yesterday..." How could this have happened, that after endless hours of preparation and organizing for the largest and most dramatic demonstration in recent times one U.S. Park Service police of-ficer can so easily reduce the impact of our message.

ure, this has happened repeatedly at every major gay event. It's become a weapon used to quiet our anger and shush our voices. The year before Stonewall, 1968, was particularly volatile in a time of great social turmoil. Robert Kennedy and Martin Luther King had and Martin Luther King had been assassinated, demonstrat-ors battled with police at the Democratic National Convention in Chicago, and in the aftermath of King's death, riots spread to over 100 American cities. Homophile groups, as they were called in the 1960s, were becoming increasingly visible in major metropolitan areas.

Of the many loosely knit groups meeting at that time, the Mattachine Society for men and the Daughters of Bilitis for women were two outstanding or-ganizations. Recognition from society was a goal that both groups shared and, although unstated in their bylaws, they unstated in their bylaws, they each provided safe social settings where acquaintances could be made. Gay political con-sciousness as we know it today began when Frank Kameny, then President of the Washington, D.C. Mattachine Society, inspired debates across the nation by stating that in absence of scientific evidence to the contrary, homosexuality is not a sickness.

According to D.O.B. activist Barbara Gittings, "These consciousness raising changes were definitely fomenting in the sixties, well before Stonewall. The one thing that Stonewall represents in my view, is a sudden bureauting of the protection of the state of the sta burgeoning of grass-roots activity." That grass roots activity has expanded since 1969 to include over 7,000 gay and lesbian organizations in all 50 states.

In 1969 the film, The Killing of Sister George, was released and immediately state police in Connecticut ordered three theatres to cut out the lesbian scenes. RKO-Stanley Warner Theatres sued to bar the police action. Three months later on June 6, 1969, an ad for The Boys in the Band film is reportedly the first film ad containing the word "homosexual." By the end of the month, Judy Garland was dead, and in the early morning hours of June 28, hundreds of patrons from the Stonewall Inn on Christopher Street in Greenwich Village were joined by drag queens and neighbors in fighting police harassment at the bar. They threw coins, cobblestones and bottles as the police arrested thirteen people.

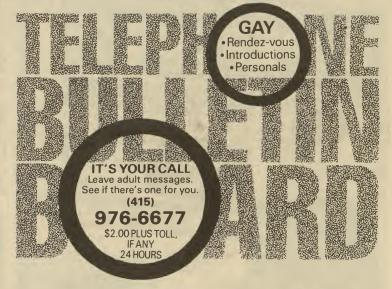

Over the next three nights, thousands of gays continued to riot to put an end to an era of intimidation and fear, to show that there would be no more blind acquiescence. Of course the quiescence. Of course the newspapers reported that there were "large crowds of young men... a few hundred youths." Again they tried to beat us at the numbers game. It's been going on for years.

As the 20th anniversary of the Stonewall Rebellion approaches this year, preparations are being made here and around the country for celebrations and parades on Gay Freedom Day. While this is a good time to look back on the accomplishments we've made, I think it's time to make some changes, too. Right now.

For 40 years now we've allowof the years now we've allowed the press to report the number of gay people in this country as an underestimated figure of ten percent based on the ancient Kinsey report. With the 1990 census coming up we can create more impact than ever, but we have to demand that the numbers runchers be accountable to us. Let's begin by getting parade organizers around the country to hire aerial photographers for these upcoming anniversary events so that mathematical formulas that are determined in advance can be used to properly and accurately determine how many we are. Yes, we can write let-ters and complain after the fact, but isn't it better to make plans to win at the numbers game? It's a detail we should not overlook. Let's stand up and be counted! V

3rd Annual Ms Leather Contest To Be Held Saturday

by Joy Schulenburg

he leather community converges in San Francisco this weekend for the third annual International Ms Leather contest. Hundreds of women and men from across North America are expected to attend the event scheduled for Saturday, March 25 at the San Franciscan Hotel on Market Street. The 11 contestants, many of whom are already local or regional titleholders, will vie for the opportunity to become International Ms Leather 1989.

The title brings with it not only a bevy of prizes, both cash and goods, but the responsibility of serving as a worldwide role model, educator and fund raiser. According to information put out by IMsL, Inc., the woman selected "promotes a positive image of the leather lifestyle. She must participate in fund-raising events to benefit the community at large and ... promote her title and the organization." A tall order, particularly in a world that is largely hostile or indifferent to the image she is expected to uphold.

International Ms Leather 1989 has some hard acts to follow. The first IMsL, selected in 1987, was Judy Tallwing-McCarthey of Portland, Ore. Tallwing, a White Mountain Apache who served as an advisor during former President Jimmy Carter's administration, is a powerful speaker who has consistently bowled over friends and foes alike with her charisma. She has become, in her words, the ''leather mamantriarch'' of the leather community. Her successor, Shan Carr, also hails from Portland. A lesbian comic who has toured widely in her one-woman show, Carr has battered down the walls of leather resistance with laughter and charm.

With the first two titleholders coming from Portland, the question this year is, naturally, can they do it again? This year's entry, Portland Leatherwoman Susie Shepherd, 39, is certainly in the running. A strong public speaker who was twice voted the Portland gay community's "Woman of the Year," Shepherd is approaching the contest with determination.

If Portland wins again, then what? Says one IMsL organizer with a laugh and a shrug, "We'll have to retire Portland to the Hall of Fame."

Shepherd, however, has some serious competition. Most of the contestants have already won their local titles and can claim both experience and potential. Cherie Matisse of Seattle is Ms National Leather Association, the only national leather title currently available to women, while San Francisco's Heron Doe was selected as Ms Festival Leather at the National Women's Music Festival

Other titleholders entering the competition include: Corky D., Ms Southern California Leather; Jolanne Tierney, Ms Sacramento Leather for 1988 and 1989; Linda Vickery of Memphis, Tenn.; Ms Southeast Leather; Cooper Aaxton, Tacoma Leatherwoman; Nina Darst, Ms San Francisco Leather; and Jo Leroux of Vancouver, B.C., Canada, Ms Vancouver Leather 1988. Contestant Bettie Harlow is sponsored by The Outcasts, a San Franciscobased women's S/M support organization, Neva Buck, a selfsponsored entrant from Carmichael, Calif., was runner up in the Sacramento leather contest.

The contest promises to be exciting entertainment for both men and women. Dynamic Bay Area singer Jo Carol and International Mr. Leather, Mike Pereyra will serve as emcees. Fire dancer Mari the Magnificent will perform her famous act and a group of talented dancers with the curious name of Z Fabulous French Poodles and the Dobermen will keep things lively. A production number featuring the Poodles and Dobermen, Pereyra, JoCarol and all the contestants looks to be a show stopner!

contest go to benefit charity. This year's beneficiaries are the Mid City Consortium to Combat AIDS, Women Emerging and the Gay Rescue Mission.

Friday night at 9 p.m. in the Main Ballroom of the San Franciscan Hotel, IMsL presents its Black Elegance Ball. This precontest warm-up event is a dressy affair featuring d.j. dancing, hors d'oeuvres and a no-host bar. Admission is $10 at the door and those attending will have a chance to meet the contestants, judges and beneficiaries.

Doors for the third annual International Ms Leather contest open at 7 p.m. and the show starts at 8 p.m. Tickets will be sold on a first-come, first-serve basis (they are going fast, but should still be available at the door). Admission is $15 for standing room and $25 for reserved seating. The San Franciscan Hotel is located at 1231 Market St. (at Civic Center). For further information call 863-1336.

Rally To Address AIDS In Minorities

The San Francisco/Bay Area Association of Black and White Men Together, with the cooperation of several Bay Area health organizations, is sponsoring a march and rally on Saturday, April I, in Oakland. This gathering is being held in conjunction with the National Black Mayor's Conference which begins April 4, also in Oakland. The National Black Mayor's Conference is one of many endorsing the event.

The march is scheduled to begin at 12 noon at the Lake Merritt BART station. The rally will begin at 1:30 p.m. at the Oakland City Hall Plaza, 14th and San Pablo Streets.

The purpose of the march and rally is to raise the awareness of everyone concerning the danger-ous lack of educational programs dealing with AIDS and its effects on people-of-color.

Many nationally known civic, religious and entertainment luminaries have been invited to participate, including the Rev. Jesse Jackson. For more information call 673-8133 or 532-4336. ▼

Easter Bonnets On Parade

Baskets, bonnets, leather... what else does a rabbit need for Easter. Sunday, March 26, from 3 to 6 p.m., the Godfather volunteers will be hosting an egg bashing beerbust at the S.F. Eagle located at 11th and Harrison Streets. An eight dollar donation entitles the participants to beer, food and entertainment. The G.S.F. provides bathrobes, slippers and care packages to PWAs and ARC patients at twelve San Francisco health care facilities and hospitals.

Modeling Duo To Pose For Gav Men's Sketch

Gay Men's Sketch announces the appearance of two special guests, professional actor/model and leather dwarf Wally Sherwood and his full-size lover Eddie Cunningham, at its drawing class Tuesday, March 28, from 7 until

Artists wishing to attend the class may obtain complete details by calling Chester at 621-6294. Reservations, however, will only be accepted from 5 until 6 p.m. the day of the session and are $10

BOWLING

Jeff has a Ball With His New Ball

by Richard McPherson

Jeff Hettmansperger has been out of the news for awhile, ad-justing to his new ball, a Columbia 300 Vector Two. This past couple of weeks, though, everything has been connecting up for him on the lanes as he shot 681, 654, 655 and 654 series his last four nights of league at Park Bowl, to put him back in the spotlight.

In the Monday Tavern Guild League (TGL), where Hett-mansperger averages 191, he began the night with a 257, followed by 198 and 226. A few days later, in the Hawaii league, where he averages 197, he shot another 250 + game, this time a 256, sandwiched between 197 and 201. The following Monday and 201. The following Monday his 655 contained 223, 201 and 232 games.

A lifetime triumph for him, though, came three days later, again in the Hawaii league, when he shot a 278 game on the way to another 654 series.

After a slow start to the evening, Jeff began the third game with eight strikes, his ninth ball going high on the head pin, leav-ing an eight count, for a spare. Three more strikes gave him the

"That game is my highest league game ever," he said proudly.

Jeff feels the new ball has made all the difference. "It's a newer ball (on the market)...in-stead of hooking at the end (right stead of nooking at the end right before it hits the pins) it begins to curve as soon as you lay it down," said Jeff. "I love the ball. I think I can control it better, especially on 10 pins."

Tell Don Gambell to get this ball to pick up 10 pins . . . then he'll have five balls, one for every situation," he laughed.

So much for our "roommate in the news" section.

Former Japantown bowler Steve Szasz, who moved over to the TGL's to join All American Trophy in the Monday TGL this season, shot a mighty 275 game, an award-winning 111 pins over his 164 average.

After starting the third game out with three strikes followed by a spare, Szasz strung together seven consecutive strikes, before tting a six count on the final

"On that last ball I was really shaky," he said, "I was glad to get it over with."

The 275 represents his career-high game. When asked how long he has been bowling, Steve responded, "Ha, ha, ha." (I sus-pect we have a long-time bowling veteran here.) "I've been bowling since I was a teenager," he smiled. Szasz finished the night with

Kevin Schwabe, a 190 average in the Wednesday TCL is back on track after a short leave of absence from the lanes with a 238, 193, 232/663 set. Tom Benton, 183 average, had the only other 600+ effort with 225, Jeff Hettmansperger.

Keglers topping 215 the week of March 2-9 at Park Bowl: Angelo maggio (173) 236, 220; Dan Burley (173) 236; Greg Bickel (176) 235; John Seiler (159) 226; Don Gambell (176) 225; Dave Lilly (188) 224; Ernie Viola (149) 2931. Honorable Mention (160 average and under): Jay Kubovec (156) 213; Hanolei Tagaloa (134) 210; John Perry (148) 201.

Meri Hayos, a 169 average, was high in the S.F. Women's Busi-ness League with a 208 game.

Two bowlers topped the 600 mark in the Community Leagues at Park Bowl the week of March at Fark Bowl the week of March 5-12; Bob Sulewski, 178 average, shot 209, 192, 201 for a 602, matched by Don George (184) with 212, 197, 193/602.

Bowlers shooting over 210: David Arnold (198) 237; Scott Miller (163) 227; Ken Gray (178) 225; Blaine Whitlock (157) 215; Ron Smola (174) 214, 201; J. Mar-tindale (155) 211; Brad McCarty (158) 210

Tsunamis Head To Vancouver

On Friday, March 24 at Van-On Friday, March 24 at Van-couver's Aquatics Centre, the future site of next year's Gay Games III, the 1989 Internation-al Gay/Lesbian Aquatics (IGLA) Championships will begin.

Defending champion San Masters will send 25 swimmers (19 men, six women) to this annual meet, which should attract over 160 swimmers from across the United States. Vancouver's host English Bay Swim Club's 50-member contingent will provide substantial competition for the Tsunamis, along with Team Seattle's 43 entrants.

The final tune-up for the Tsunamis was, however, at the shorter course pool distance at Cal's Spieker Pool in Berkeley on March 11. These shorter distances are scheduled in the United States from February until June, while the longer pool is used for July through October.

The meet in Berkeley saw just The meet in Berkeley saw just a half-dozen Tsunamis set nine personal records, led by Marta Kreps, 29, with five bests in freestyle, backstroke, and individual medley events. Two I.M. times were also Tsunami team records in the 25-29 age bracket for Diane Davis, 32, and Sue Escalante, 32, each set their own Tsunami records in the 30-34 bracket. Davis sprinted to a 31.33-second finish in the 50-yard freestyle, while Escalante took another route, entering the 500-yard distance freestyle and setting a San Francisco Park & Rec record with a time of 6:44.11.

All-American Chris Waters, 26, won all four of his events for the Tsunamis and, if you've ever competed in swimming, you'll know how good Chris is when you consider these times, which weren't even his best times. Waters won the grueling 200-yard butterfly (1:58.11), the 200-yard freestyle (1:50.48), the four-stroke 100-yard individual medley (57.44), and the tiring 200-yard individual medley (2:03.00).

Rick Windes, 34, the recent Apex Award winner, won a fifth event for the Tsunamis in the 200 freestytle (1:54.97) for the 30-34 age bracket. Windes also took a very respectable fourth in the 50-yard free sprint (23.99) and set a personal best in the 100-yard individual medley (1:03.35).

Duke Dahlin performed impressively in the 100 and 200 individual medleys, setting a personal best time and a Tsunami and SFRP record in the 200 I.M. (2:29.78) for third place, to go along with a second-place finish in the 100 I.M. (1:05.28).

Slammers Upset By Stars in OT, Await March 30 Showdown

It's known as March Madness That's the time of year when the regular basketball season turns into tournament time. That's the time of year when life becomes difficult for regular season champions because everyone is shooting to upset the league

That happened to the San Francisco Slammers last Thurs-day night at the Mission Recrea-tion Center. The Slammers, who tion Center. The Stammers, who won the regular season San Fran-cisco Recreation and Parks Department 'A' League women's basketball title, fell victim to a superb shooting performance by Gerry Booker as the Hamilton Stars upset the Slammers in overtime, 72-66.

The victory moves the Stars into the 'A' League semi-finals to-night at Hamilton against Mis-sion Rec Center, which held off the Blazers, 52-43. The winners of that game will play the Slam-mers for the title on Thursday, March 30 at 8 p.m. at Kezar Pavilion. Double elimination status is the reward for the Slammers because of their regular season title, but that doesn't take away the hurt of a tough loss to a fine team. Booker was simply unstop-pable in the OT. The Stars' forward-center canned two threepoint shots, one two-point field goal and a pair of free throws in scoring 10 of the winners' 13 overtime points. She ended up with 20 points for the night to tie teammate Lonia Hutchon for top scoring honors in the game.

The game was a close one all of the way. The Slammers, behind the scoring of Lisa Cataldo and Alice Butler, jumped to a 12-8 first period lead. Cataldo had six points and Butler four. However, the Stars began whittless was the Slams and Stars began whittless was the Slams are shown to the stars began whittless was the Slams are shown to the slaws are shown to the slaws are shown to the s ing away at the Slammers' lead. It was 24-22, Slammers, at the half. The Slammers had another two-point lead at the end of the third period, 40-38. The two teams were knotted at 59-all at the end of regulation.

Both teams had three players in double figures. Besides the 20-point efforts of both Booker and Hutchon, the Stars got 14 points out of Deborah Davis. Guard Liz Ringrose led the Slammers with 19 points while Cataldo had 18 and Anne Banks

The loss was only the second in nine games for the Slammers. ▼

Captains Exposed

by Lauren Ward

Imagine a pool league without responsible captains for its teams. The result would surely be an anarchistic muddle that would be short lived at best.

be short lived at best.

The San Francisco Pool Association relies on many responsible individuals to help it function smoothly and no one is more important to that effort than the leaders of this season's 30 constituent teams. The Captains' Tournament, schedule for March 28 at Park Bowl, will gather those individuals for an evening of friendly competition and networking designed to help improve the quality of everyone's league experience.

While hosting last Sunday's Maud's afternoon 8-ball soiree, Liz Norko reflected on the ideal captain's attributes. "A captain should be focussed on team unity," she said. "They shouldn't put such an emphasis on winning that their players are ostracized for making mistakes. Players that are relaxed and feel the whole team's support are going to have more fun at league play and will probably perform better as a result."

At the most recent SFPA Board meeting the concept of creating a "captain's pledge" was discussed. It was noted that many of their responsibilities aren't currently clearly defined and this could be a useful tool in helping them fulfill their potential. The following is a rough draft of that pledge:

"In accepting the designation of 'captain,' I realize that I am also accepting numerous responsibilities. The most basic of these is to act as a conduit of information between the Board, other teams, my sponsor, and my teammates. I realize that I must maintain the support of my sponsor and teammates and will demonstrate my support of them. At team matches I will carry a player's handbook and provide the scorewheel when hosting.

"I will be sure that the completed scoresheet gets delivered to the statistician at the conclusion of the match. I will be gracious and friendly, whether hosting a match or visiting. I will thoroughly familiarize myself with the league's rules and policy and refer back to them if necessary. I realize that anger is to be avoided during disagreements with opponents and will contact the Head Referee or another. Board member should a rational solution to any problem elude us. I will set the standard for good sporting conduct on my team and expect it of all league players.

"I will assure my team that advice given during a time out is only advice and that the ultimate choice and responsibility for actions at the table rest with the player. I will maintain the demeanor of an effective leader or designate someone who can, either on a temporary or permanent basis."

The commitment of every captain to such a pledge should dramatically increase everyone's enjoyment of league play.

Dial JOE-POOL for SFPA information.

Janet Doty, registered dietician and sports nutritionist, will conduct a seminar on Sports Nutrition upstairs at Amelia's on Tuesday, March 28 at 7:30 p.m. This is the second seminar in a series of three that are designed to raise the level of health in the lesbian and gay community.

Are you running out of energy before your exercise routine is finished? Janet Doty's seminar will cover all the basics from energy balance and how to raise or lower your metabolism; how to lose body fat, fuel utilization during exercise, carbohydrates, protein and fat, aerobic versus anerobic metabolism, and the ideal diet for your form of exercise, whether it be walking or bodybuilding.

In 1980, Doty opened her private practice in San Francisco. She is a consultant to physicians, corporations and individuals. She received her bachelor of science degree in Food Nutrition and Dietetics and completed her internship at the University of California Berkeley in 1978. She is a member of the Sports and Cardiovascular Nutrition Practice Group.

The seminar is sponsored by the Arcadia Bodybuilding Society and the Market Street Gym. ABS is a non-profit corporation that is licensed by the state of California. It is dedicated to the education, appreciation and promotion of the sport of bodybuilding, with the focus on the gay community. Membership is open to any interested individual for $10. ABS is the sponsor of Physique '89, the National Gay and Lesbian Bodybuilding Championships, which will be held at the Palace of Fine Arts on June 24, the day before the Gay and Lesbian Freedom Day Parade. ABS is committed to providing financial support to all ABS bodybuilding members that plan to attend the 1990 Gay Games in Vancouver.

For the seminar on Sports Nutrition bring notebook and pencil. $6 for public, $4 for ABS members. Tickets in advance at Market Street Gym, 2301 Market St. There is limited seating upstairs at Amelia's, 647 Valencia, between 17th and 18th Streets. ▼

At the end of the 1970s, following the acclaimed TV movie That Certain Summer and the groundbreaking sitcom Soap, continuing gay characters were introduced in a number of unsuccessful TV series (Dec. anyone represented). series (Does anyone remember The Nancy Walker Show?). Many expected the 1980s to be a time of increased gay visibility on net work television.

ABC is the only network that offered continuing gay characters this year: On HeartBeat; with a newly introduced character on thirtysomething; and on Hooperman, the John Ritter vehicle that man, the John Mitter venicle that a striking-ly gorgeous gay cop in San Fran-cisco (as played by strikingly gorgeous Joseph Gian) is per-petually lonely.

Is ABC more progressive and pro-gay than CBS or NBC? Not according to Prof. Kaplan, who believes, "ABC is making a conscious effort to attract an urban middle-class demographic group. They're aware that gays are part of that audience. Their approach makes economic sense.

Gay themes appear on single episodes of numerous other TV shows. We've seen a courageous Olympic athlete come out of the closet on L.A. Law, a recently divorced black man fall in love with Judd Hirsch on Dear John, and an older woman shocking the Golden Girls by revealing her lesbianism—each one non-offensive to gays, and each sufficiently non-sexual and low-key so as to be a poor target for right-wing zealots.

"Television is in the business of attracting as much audience as possible," Prof. Kaplan offers, "and then selling that audience to advertisers. They're not in the business of offending people."

A retired New York television producer adds, ''Gays on network TV right now are all palatable no raging queens, nobody in leather—about as in-depth as black characters on television 20

How long will it be before we see a broad spectrum of gays on TV, including an enjoyably bitchy gay villian? How long before we gay vinani: Tow long before we see an affectionate gay couple? How long before we get a network television adaptation of Tales of the City, or Parting Glances, with their honest, matter-of-fact por traits of gay life?

Or will television ever show us such things? The answers will depend on what influences most effect the media in the next decade.

'Gay Generation Gaps' To Open Men's Workshop

A nine-week workshop for gay men interested in exploring op-tions for the 1990s will begin with a session on "Gay Generation Gaps," On Thursday night, March 30, 6:30 p.m. at Everett Middle School, 450 Church St., San Francisco.

Following sessions will be held on Wednesday nights, from April on Wednesday nights, from April 5 through May 24. Topics will include: "Gay Underemployment," "Exploring the Leather World," "Political Realities for the 1990s," "Erotica and Racist Stereotypes," and "Taking Offense at Media."

Registration is by attendance There is no charge. This class is a service of the Castro-Valencia extension of the San Francisco Community College District.

For information you can contact the class instructor, Henry Mach, at 863-4910.

Travel Writers Needed

Trekking through the Himalayas, on safari in Kenya, bicycling through China, walking for peace in the Soviet Union, recovering from war in Nicaragua, helping a friend die in New Zealand, climbing the pyramids in Egypt, coping in Tokyo...

In recent years, more and more gay men have broken away from the Fire Island, Key West, Ibizia, Amsterdam gay enclave circuit and are interested in experienc-ing people and places of a more exotic nature.

Local gay writer Bill Strubbe is trying to put together a book which would be a collection written by five writers with three to five pieces each about travel essays from around the world

According to Strubbe, the book is not set up to be a gay travel guide, but he adds, "the gay angle could be very subtle."

He says that he wants some ense "of the broader, social, political, spiritual aspects of the culture conveyed through the writing. I am particularly in-terested in unusual, out of the way places. Very few of the essays will be about Western countries."

Strubbe said two publishing houses have shown an interest in the book proposal and are waiting for sample stories from writers. If you are a writer, love to travel, have been published or would like to be, and can come up with three to five articles from 6-10,000 words each, please send your best examples to Bill Strubbe, 3487 16th Street, San Francisco, CA 94114. His telephone number is (415) 626-6210. List the countries you have visited and feel you could write about (or have written about). In-clude a self-addressed stamped envelope and phone number Send by April 20.

Here's an uplifting note: Mal Garcia held a 50/50 raffle in the Wednesday TGL last week for BEAR (Bowlers' Emergency Aid Relief) and collected $312. Fifty percent went to the winner in the drawing held, they night. The drawing held that night. The lucky recipient of $152 was David Kriete, who donated the money back to BEAR. Also, one bowler in Park's Hawaii League decided, after putting out over $500 over the course of the season for the trip, that he could not make the week-long May vacation. No, he didn't sell the trip—he gave the trip to a PWA. That's the spirit!

We often repeat, though unintentionally, the ingrained behavioral patterns that we inherited from our families. If we grew up within a dysfunctional family, we might suffer painful memories, feel inadequate, experience difficulties in relationships and find life unfulfilling. Psychotherapy provides a means to enhance self-esteem, to develop relationship skills, to resolve family problems, to cultivate unutraing ways of relating to ourselves and others. By confronting the past and changing self-defeating patterns, we can revitalize our lives and relationships.
